Weymouth Gazette AND TRANSCRIPT

WEYMOUTH, MASS., FRIDAY, AUG. 7, 1914. VOL. XLVIII. NO. 21. PRICE FIVE CENTS

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY-TWO YEARS AGO.

FORTY-SIX YEARS AGO.

At the town meeting last March, a committee was appointed to examine the town liquor agency, kept by Amos S. White. The committee made an examination and reported to the selectmen that Mr. White kept nothing but pure liquor, upon which they re-appointed him agent. Any one wanting a good article in this line will find it to their interest to purchase of the town agent at the Landing, as they are sure to get what they call for. Some are so bitterly apposed to a town agency that they send to Boston and purchase it illegally rather than patronize the agency.

* * *

Among the business changes of the past week is that of E. C. Bumpus, Attorney and Councillor at Law. He has taken the office of the late E. F. Hall, where he may be found at all hours of the day and evening. Mr. Bumpus has had the benefit of the excellent office of Edward Avery, Esq. and has been with James Humphrey Esq. since commencing practice.

THIRTY-ONE YEARS AGO.

Workmen are expected to commence on the water works at South Weymouth next week. The stand pipe is to be located on Central street, probably on the lot owned by George Canterbury.

* * *

It was well known that efforts were being made to procure a new band stand for South Weymouth, but when it stood in Columbian square, a structure complete in itself, on Tuesday evening, many people looked with surprise but pleased with the early and successful result. The new band stand was designed by our skillful carpenter, Dwight Rogers, who took the contract for $125, this sum to include the painting.

* * *

First Ass't P. M. Gener' Hatton has ordered the discontinuance of the drums at the post offices, and the P. M.'s have posted notices to that effect. A. P. O. regulation provides that addresses of letters shall not be exposed to public view, and hence the drums must be removed. The familar letter "wheel" so long in use in many country post offices is to be discontinued, owing to the fact that its existence is a violation of the postal law, which prohibits any outside party from learning who has a letter in the mail and the place of post mark.

TWENTY-THREE YEARS AGO.

Something new. A sidewalk has been made on Pond Plain. This is the first sidewalk that has been made in that locality since the settlement of the town.

* * *

A movement is on foot to form a Catholic cemetery association for the purpose of beautifying the cemetery and a meeting will be called at an early date to organize.

* * *

The removing of the ledge on Quincy avenue is progressing rapidly. A blast Wednesday did a good deal of shaking up. Another week will see the job finished.

* * *

Will some one tell us what is good to eat for breakfast before taking a steamboat excursion, not for the purpose of petting the palate. We want to know what kind of food will come up the easiest? [Try sardines, milk and hot biscuit, and when you get on board watch the water that is nearest you; don't look at distant objects.—Ed.]

TWENTY-ONE YEARS AGO.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Dunbar who were married last week at South Weymouth, will make their home with Mr. Dunbar's parents on Commercial street, where they held receptions Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

* * *

The Universalist church at North Weymouth was the scene last night of a most brilliant and yet sad occasion. A farewell reception was tendered to Rev. B. F. Eaton and wife, who for many years have been identified with every interest of this church and society, but now dissolve their connection with this people for other fields of labor.

* * *

Last Sunday night, one of the heaviest storms for many years came upon this part of the town. We seem to be right in the track of the storm and considerable damage was done. One of the large trees on Union street was blown over, causing a cessation of travel and necessitating the putting out of the electric lights in order that it could be removed. The chimneys on the factory of A. O. Crawford and the residence of John Beasley were razed to the roof. Considerable damage was done to many trees and to private property. The rain came down in sheets and was accompanied with hail stones. At times it was impossible to see over ten feet ahead.

REGINALD NASH, MILTON COACH.

South Weymouth Boy And Brown Athlete Honored.

Reginald Nash of South Weymouth, the former Brown Universaty athlete, has been made a member of the Milton High school faculty and will have charge of the football and baseball teams at that school. Sidney Hazelton has been in charge the past few years.

Nash has made an enviable record, both as a student and as an athlete at the Rhode Island institution. During his junior year he was chosen to membership in the honary society of Phi Belta Kappa, ranking among the first three in scholarship in his class.

In athletics "Reg" was especially prominent. He played centerfield on the varsity base ball nine for the past four years, captaining the nine this last season. He was also a member of the varsity cross country team, star end of his class football eleven and a guard on the 1914 basketball five.

Nash was very popular with his classmates, being president of his class in his sophomore year and in his senior year was chosen president of the Camarian club, the representative senior society. Nash's home is at Liberty square, Nash's Corner and his many friends in town wish him great success in his new duties the coming year.

Baseball Notes.

Reginald Nash with Milton High! It is safe to say that the Milton boys will be heard from in baseball next spring.

When the league broke up in Nova Scotia that "Pappy" Wall was playing in, the former W. H. S. star was sticking for 460. Some batting!

Arbie Dam was in left field last Saturday for the Braintree A. A., but he isn't the speed boy of former years by a long shot. He is still hustling to win and plays hard all the time, but the old speed is lacking on the bases and in covering ground.

Ray Condrick is pitching fine ball for the C. M. A. this summer and seems to have regained his old time form.

"Billey" Griffin the star backstop of the Weymouth A. C. is putting up a fine game of ball with the South Weymouth ball tossers this year. Bill is one of the best all around catchers in town.

To-morrow the Clapp Memorial nine journeys to Braintree to play the return game on Hollis field with the Braintree A. A. nine. Ray Condrick will twirl for the C. M. A. aggregation.

Kenneth L. Nash of the St. Louis Cardinals was at his home in South Weymouth over Sunday. "Ken" played third base against the Braves on Saturday and again on Monday. In Saturday's game at Fenway Park he got a screeching two bagger and accepted his one chance in first class style. On Monday he had but one chance and easily captured that. He failed to hit safely in Monday's game.

At 8.29 last Saturday afternoon "Ump" Fred Nolan called the game between the C. M. A. and the Braintree A. A. Some change from the first of the season, when the game started about ten minutes late. Keep up the good work!

Clapp 3, Braintree 1.

In a hotly contested game at the C. M. A. grounds East Weymouth last Saturday the Clapp Memorial nine pinned a 3 to 1 defeat on the Braintree A. A. of Braintree.

Holly Moralles was the star of the game, getting a hit, one put-out and stealing two bases.

Ray Condrick pitched for Clapp and was in fine form. Foolish baserunning cost the visitors at least two runs. The summary:

C. M. A.—Deane 1b, Vender 1b, Humphrey 3b, Fraher c, Drinkwater cf, Moralles lf, Bates ss, Gorman 2b, Condrich p, Bumpus rf.

Braintree A. A.—Horgan ss, Hubbard cf, Mahar cf, J. Riley 2b, Dam lf, Rein c, F. Riley 3b, Cahill rf, Leamy 1b, Cook p.

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

Runs made by Humphrey, Drinkwater, Moralles and J. Riley. Two basehits, Bumpus. Three basehits, F. Riley. Stolen bases Drinkwater, Condrick, Bumpus and Moralles 2. Base on balls, by Condrick 3 by Cook. Struck out, by Condrick 11, by Cook 9. Sacrifice hits, Fraher. Double plays, Fraher to Deane; Cook to F. Riley. Passed balls, Frader. Umpires, Nolan and Delorey.

ANNUAL COUNTRY FAIR.

Children's Pageant a Feature at Trinity Church Garden Party Last Saturday.

The widely advertised and long looked forward to garden fete of the Trinity Episcopal church of Weymouth, was held last Saturday afternoon and evening at Craig Cliff, Rev. William Hyde's estate, off Commercial street, Weymouth. The affair turned out to be one of the most successful ever held.

In the afternoon a "country fair" was with the several departments in charge of the following:—Cafe, Mrs. Charles Hoffses, Mrs. Charles Beltring, Mrs. John Lilley, Mrs. Frank Peyton, Miss Alice Northrop and Mrs. Thomas Mallon; tea garden, Mrs. John Ludden and Mrs. Thomas Paine; candy table, Miss Edith Conlin and Mrs. Wm. Adams; "orange grove," Miss Irene Lilley, Miss Mary Morley, Miss Margaret Beltring and Miss Lillian Beltring; ice cream booth, Thomas Paine, Joseph Forsyth and Mrs. Joseph Sewell; Japanese games, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Daniels. Joseph Forsyth had charge of the sports and games for the young people.

The ball game between the Athletes of Weymouth Heights and "Us Boys" of Weymouth, resulted in a victory for the Heights nine 10 to 3.

There was a very pretty children's pageant arranged by and under the direction of Miss Agnes Hyde, assisted by Miss Alice Northrop. Spring, summer, autumn, winter and the various holidays of the year were impersonated in complete costume by Roberta Findlay, Charles Hemmingway, Helen Wyman, Thelma Wright, Irene Lilley, Belle Lavery, Clarence Lund, Harriett Lund, Joseph Mallen, Virginia Vernier, C. Hemmingway, Clarence Wyman, Josephine Lavery, Thomas Ramsdell, Elizabeth Hyde, Charles Wedling, Mary Liley, Susie Pluse, Douglas Cain, Hannah Spence and Thomas Spence.

In the evening the grounds were illuminated with varied colored electric lights and there was orchestral music and dancing.

Judge Cook At Home.

Hon Louis A. Cook, Weymouth representative to the Weymouth England's celebration of the sailing of Gov. Endicott to these shores in 1628 arrived home yesterday.

Since the ceremony at Weymouth early in June the Judge accompanied by Mrs. Cook has travelled extensively in England gathering historic data as to some of our early families and later they spent a short season sight seeing in Paris.

At Paris they were joined by their daughter Miss Florence Cook who had for a while been studying at the Montessor training school in Rome.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook and Miss Florence sailed from Liverpool on July 28th and in the passage across escaped German war ships.

Interesting lectures on "My Summer Experience Abroad" may be looked for the coming fall and winter.

Weymouth A. C. 5, Marshall A. A. 3.

At the Weymouth fair grounds Saturday afternoon the Weymouth A. C. defeated the Marshall A. A. of South Hanover 5 to 3. The fielding of Davis for the home team and the batting of Smith were the features.

Weymouth A. C.—Howe, rf; Barrows, 2b; Griffin, c; Thomes, ss; Munroe, lf, p; Davis, cf; Cullinane, 3b; Torrey, 1b and Callahan, p, lf.

Marshall, A. A.—McCarty, lf, Ells, 3b; Smith, 1b; Marshall, c; Chenevert, cf; Loyd, rf; Beals, ss; O'Harra, 2b; Joshlin, 2b and Mahoney, p.

Base hits—Howe, Barrows, Griffin. Thomes, Munroe 2, Davis 2, McCarty 2, Ells 2, Smith 3, Marshall 1, O'Harra. Two base hits—Barrows. Home runs—Thomes. Stolen bases—Smith, Marshall, Chenevert, O'Harra, Munroe 2, Davis 2, Torrey 2. First on balls off—Mahoney 5, Callahan 2, Munroe 2. Double play—Barrows to Thomas to Torrey, Beals to Smith, O'Hara to Beals. Passed balls—Marshall. Hit by pitcher—Beals. Umpire—Holbrook. Time—2 hours.

Mind.

The man who cannot wonder, who does not habitually wonder, is but a pair of spectacles behind which there is no eye. Let those who have eyes look through him, then he may be useful.—Carlyle.

Gigantic Formosan Tree.

In Formosa there is a tree between 2,500 and 3,000 years old, with a circumference of 65 feet and the lowest branch 45 feet from the ground. The tree is a species of cypress, the Japanese "beniki."

AT DEANE HOMESTEAD.

Zebulon Deane Celebrates 80th Birthday Last Friday.

The annual gathering in celebration of the birthday anniversary of Zebulon Deane of South Weymouth, was held last Friday at the Deane homestead on Hollis street. Guests were present from Weymouth, Cambridge, Brockton and South Weymouth.

The celebration marked the passing of Mr. Deane's 80th milestone in life's journey. He retains good health, takes entire care of a large garden and enjoys many forms of recreation. At the supper at 5 o'clock, the vegetables were from Mr. Deane's garden. The supper was served out of doors.

Among those present were Mrs. Augustus Deane, wife of the host, Linley Deane of Weymouth, Miss Annie Deane, Almon Deane, Miss Addie Deane of South Weymouth, Joseph Deane of Brockton, Mrs. Anna Ells of Weymouth, Mrs. Cora Deane of South Weymouth, James Deane and Miss Jennie Deane of Brockton, Miss Mildred Deane of Brockton, Miss Dorothy Benson of Cambridge, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Whitcomb of South Weymouth, Miss Rosie Faxon of South Weymouth and Mrs. Loud of South Weymouth.

Social Event.

The Rev. Fathers Lewis and Eustis with a class of twenty students from the Passionist Fathers' Monastery in Brighton, spent a very enjoyable day Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Condrick and Mr. and Mrs. John G. Shea on Broad street, the outing being the celebration of the Confrater Xavier who is the cousin of Mrs. Condrick and Mrs Shea. Other guests were Rev. J. B. Holland, pastor of the church of the Sacred Heart and Edward Conroy, theological student at St. John's Seminary, Brighton. Vocal and instrumental selections were given by the students accompanied on the piano by the Misses Mae and Anna Herlihy of Holyoke. Luncheon and dinner were served by Mrs. Condrick and Mrs. Shea. The students attending the monastery are from all parts of the United States.

Bear Your Own Troubles.

Things cannot always go your way. Learn to accept in silence the minor aggravations, cultivate the gift of taciturnity, and consume your own smoke with an extra draft of hard work, so that those about you may not be annoyed with the dust and soot of your complaints. — William Osler.

MARTIN KILLORY AT REST.

Long Time Rresident of East Weymouth Passed Away Last Sunday.

Martin Killory, age 76, died last Sunday at his home on Broad street, East Weymouth. He had been in poor health for some time.

Mr. Killory was born in County Claire, Ireland, and when a young man came to this country and located in Fairhaven. He resided there for 25 years. Thirty-five years ago he came to this town where he has since resided. He was a shoeworker by trade.

He is survived by his widow and seven sons, Dr. George Killory of Boston, Thomas and John Killory of Brockton, Martin Killory of Whitman and Joseph, James and Michael Killory of this town.

Funeral services were held in the church of the Immaculate Conception Tuesday morning. At the solemn high mass of requiem, Rev. James W. Allison, rector of the church, was the celebrant.

Burial was in the St. Francis Xavier cemetery. John Killory, Thomas Killory, George Killory, Michael Killory, Martin Killory and Joseph Killory were pallbearers.

Mrs. Minna Bailey.

Mrs. Minna Bailey wife of Charles T. Bailey died at her home on Broad street Monday morning after a long illness aged 57. She was a daughter of the late Isreal Dailey and was born and always lived in Weymouth. Besides her husband she leaves a daughter Miss Olga Bailey, a son Russell Bailey and two brothers George Dailey of East Weymouth and Warner P. Dailey of Chicago, Ill.

The funeral took place from her late residence yesterday afternoon and was conducted by Rev. F. B. Cressey of Cambridge former pastor of the Baptist church here The interment was at Village cemetery.

East Weymouth Congregational S. S. Picnic.

A bigger and better picnic for 1915 is the slogan of those who attended the annual picnic at Island Grove Park, Abington, last Saturday.

Island Grove surpassed every ones expectation, which is without doubt the most excellent place in this vicinity for holding a picnic and those who were unable to attend this year, it is hoped may have the chance to go next year.

The ride to the grove occupied the time from 9 until 10.30 and immediately upon the arrival, the sports were run off, resulting as follows:—

Base ball throwing—boys over 18, 1st, Elbridge Gardner; 2d, Norman E. Dizer. Boys over 15, 1st, Paul Humphrey; 2d, Stanton Newcomb. Boys under 15, 1st Dean Randall; 2d, Channing Libby. Girls over 15, 1st Elizabeth Humphrey; 2d, Theodora Keith.

Base ball throwing—girls under 15, 1st, Sarah Rix; 2d, Gladys Hollis. For women, 1st, Clara Reamy; 2d, Mrs. D. D. Randall.

Fifty yd. dash—Boys over 15, 1st Donald Canterbury; Elbridge Gardner and John T. Dizer tied for 2d. Girls, 1st, Sarah Rix; 2d, Ruth Graves. Girls under 15, 1st, Gladys Hollis; 2d, Doris Hollis. Boys under 15, 1st, Paul Humphrey; 2d, Stanton Newcomb.

Three legged race—1st, Newcomb and Gibson; 2d, Asa Pratt and William Blackney.

Peanut race for girls—1st, Doris Hollis and Rachael Sampson and Ruby Graves tied for 2d.

Running broad jump—boys over 18, 1st Elbridge Gardner; 2d, John T. Dizer. boys over 15, 1st, Paul Humphrey; 2d, John Blackney. Boys under 15, 1st, Dean Randall; 2d, Asa Pratt. For girls, 1st, Theodora Keith; 2d Sarah Rix.

Dinner at 12 in the grove was perhaps the most pleasing, if not the most beneficial feature.

At two o'clock the ball game was in order. Boating on the pond and rides in the motor boat filled in the time until the special car was ready to leave.

The weather man was held in high esteem by the picnic party as no rain fell until the party was safely on the way home, and they arrived in Jackson square at 5.30 o'clock with the recollection of one of the best picnics ever held.

No Wonder He Felt Small.

"The Looker On" in the Boston Record says: "The other story is one my friend heard in Arkansas, about a man who was afraid of a thunder storm and crawled into a hollow log. The thunder rolled, the rain poured down in torrents, and the log swelled up until the poor fellow was wedged in so tight he couldn't move. All his past sins began to pass before him. Then he suddenly remembered that he had not paid his newspaper subscription. He said that made him feel so small that he crawled out of the log through a knot hole."

TOWN BUSINESS

Selectmen and other Departments Discuss Work and Ways and Means.

At the meeting of the Selectmen on Monday it was decided to sell at public auction the River street school house property and Geo. L. Newton and Bradford Hawes were authorized to make the sale. This is a property developed a long time ago to accomodate a school population connected with the Bradley works, but since the advent of street cars the school has been abandoned and the scholars transported to the Athens school.

The St. Jerome church was granted the use of the piano saved from the Town hall fire for a picnic to be held on its grounds at North Weymouth on Saturday.

On account of the financial disturbance occasioned by the European wars money is no longer available at rates which the town has been paying and which come within the limits of the vote in regard to the purchase of fire fighting machines and town treasurer Stetson has advised the Selectmen to call a halt on contracts.

The Amalgamated Association of street and electic railroad employes were granted permit for two picnics at Downer Landing. They deposit $30 for Weymouth police service and in addition select 20 of their own men to act in that capacity and they will act as special police by appointment of the town.

The double tracking of Washington street from Washington to Lincoln square comes to the front this week with a definite plan for improvement of the street and better condition of travel. For more definite information read the petition of the S. R. R. Co. in this issue.

FIRE TRUCK AT SOUTH WEYMOUTH

James K. Boyd and Son, Inc., Machine Gives Many Successful Tests, Including Road Test.

The five ton fire engine demonstrated at East Weymouth last week Tuesday, gave a very successful test in South Weymouth last Tuesday afternoon. Water was taken from a hydrant on Union street near Bates avenue and the streams were played into Reeds field.

The same kind of tests were in order as at East Weymouth and all were very successful indeed. The machine was handled by the same men as at the previous demonstration.

With 22 men aboard, the machine was sent out on a road test to Pond Plain and to Mosquito Plain. The machine easily raced along with its load at 30 miles an hour and went up hills in a fine and cleancut manner.

The machine returned to Milton Tuesday night.

Massachusetts Farmers Can Grow Alfalfa.

The Agricultural experiment station has just issued a bulletin which all farmers having live stock to feed should read. This bulletin presents the author's estimate of alfalfa as a crop for Massachusetts farmers. It gives results of both home and co-operative experiments, to date, descibes the methods of soil preparation, fertilization and seeding which seem likely to prove most successful; discusses the principal obstacles to success, and the best methods of meeting them; and gives directions for the general management

Those desiring the bulletin should apply to the Massachusetts Agricultural experiment station, Amherst, Mass.

W. R. C.

P. P. Mrs. Mary E. Mahoney and P. I. Mrs. Margaret Culley attended the picnic at Revere Monday of the Soldiers' Home aides, and the dancing party at Condit's following.

A meeting of the executive committee will be held Friday August seventh at G. A. R. hall to arrange for the entertainment of the Norfolk County association in September and transact other important business.

President Mrs. Agnes Baldwin, P. P. Mrs. Mary Mahoney and P. I. Mrs. Margaret Culley attended the dedication of the Sarah E. Fuller memorial at Forestdale cemetery Malden last Saturday. The service was beautiful and impressive.

On the evening of August first the president and Mrs. Mahoney were guests at a birthday party tendered to Commander Marstin of Paul Revere Post of Quincy at his home in Braintree.

Possibly Resent the Training.

"The trouble about husbands," remarked the square-jawed woman, "is that after you get them thoroughly trained to shut all the windows when it rains, and feed the bird and look after the rubber plant they get so sickly looking and discouraged they cast a gloom over the household."

HEARD IN WEYMOUTH.

How Bad Backs Have Been Made Strong—Kidney Ills Corrected.

All over Weymouth you hear it. Doan's Kidney Pills are keeping up the good work. Weymouth people are telling about it—telling of bad backs made sound again. You can beleive the testimony of your own townspeople. They tell it for the benefit of you who are suffering. If your back aches, if you feel lame, sore and miserable, if the kidneys act too frequently, or passages are painful, scanty and off color, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has helped so many of your friends and neighbors. Follow this Weymouth citizen's advice and give Doan's a chance to do the same for you.

Asa B. Binney, 112 Broad St. Weymouth says: "I had severe backaches. My kidneys were week and irregular in action. I found that one box of Doan's Kidney Pills made a great improvement, removing the pain and regulating the kidney action. Doan's Kidney Pills have also been used by others of my family with great benefit. My opinion of this remedy remains the same at this time as when I gave my recommendation a few months ago".

Mr. Binney is only one of many Weymouth people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Binney had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. HANDLING BAGGAGE.

A System That Simplifies Matters For the Railroad Men.

Like most other mysteries, that of handling the thousands of pieces of luggage that come to a great railroad station has a simple solution. It seems to the layman that there must be confusion when incoming trains dump hundreds of trunks and hand bags into the baggage rooms for distribution to all quarters of the city. System, which has come to play an important part in all business nowadays, has made baggage handling a rather simple matter for the railroads. It is the use of a key number that does the trick.

Travelers have noticed that their check numbers run into six figures, if they pay attention to the figures on their checks at all. It is the third of these units, counting back from the final number, that is the key to the whole system of distribution. The expressman who handles the baggage for its home distribution hands in to the baggage agent his mass of collected checks, all sorted on that basis, and the baggage handlers hustle the stuff out with very little delay.

Suppose he has only a few checks from an incoming local train. They may read 384741, 384201, 384599, 384735, 384812, 384487, 384622, 384256, 384739, 384747, 384056 and 384123. In each case the first three figures are identical—384. The first variation begins with the fourth, or hundreds, unit. By means of this unit he separates his checks—all the 7's in one bunch, all the 5's in another, and so on.

In the baggage room the trunks and bags are distributed as soon as received in ten apartments, each bearing a unit number, from 0 to 9. That number invariably represents the hundreds unit of the claimant's check. The trunk with a 384543 check would go to the same compartment as one numbered 385543 or 383543 or 12543 or 987543. The figure 5 is the key figure, with the result that there is never any confusion or trouble in locating the baggage desired. It would be in the compartment numbered 5.

This simple plan solves the mystery as to the prompt location of a piece of hand baggage when a passenger rolls up to the baggage room door in a taxi to get the piece of luggage he has had checked and has to wait but a moment to obtain it. It is a very simple solution of the trouble that a few years ago annoyed all travelers who had to wait for baggage to be transferred from one terminal to another in their own conveyances.—New York Sun.

It Was Lincoln's Knife.

Lincoln was always ready to join in a laugh at his own expense and used to tell the following story with intense enjoyment: "In the days when I used to be on the circuit I was accosted in the cars by a stranger, who said, 'Excuse me, sir, but I have an article in my possession which belongs to you.' 'How is that?' I asked, considerably astonished. The stranger took a jackknife from his pocket. 'This knife,' said he, 'was placed in my hands some years ago with the injunction that I was to keep it until I found a man uglier than myself. I have carried it from that time to this. Allow me to say, sir, that I think you are fairly entitled to the property.'"—"Everyday Life of Abraham Lincoln."

Greatest Song Writers.

The immortal quartet of song writers are Goethe, Heine, Burns and Beranger. Of the four Burns is by far the most popular. Goethe was at heart an "Olympian" and in all things a critic; Heine was in his deepest soul a pessimist and cynic; Beranger, while much more human, was a little bit too critical, while Burns, democratic to the core and of immense sympathy, threw himself into the common human life of the world with a whole heart and wrote the songs that will live and be loved while humanity endures.—New York American.

Staging a Trial.

"Do you think you have sufficient counsel for my boy?" "Yes; we have a spread-eagle orator, a sob specialist, an insanity expert and a little cuss who knows the law, if we need any law."

BEAUTY OF THE HUDSON.

Its Picturesque Scenery Far Surpasses That of the Rhine.

The Hudson river is very remarkable in several respects. In the first place, for 150 miles of its length it is not a true river but a fiord. From Albany to the ocean its rock bottom, with the exception of a few islands, is below sea level. How far below, it is not accurately known. Opposite Storm King mountain engineers bored a thousand feet down into the dirt and sand that fill the gorge under the water and did not find rock bottom. The shore line at Albany is at practically the same elevation as the shore line at New York, and the tide rises at Albany two and eight-tenths feet. The upward and downward flowing of the tide, of which Hudson took advantage in his voyage, had long been noticed by the Indians, who spoke of the river with wonder as the stream that flowed both ways.

The river is unsurpassed for its great natural beauty. The distinguished German surgeon, Dr. Adolph Lorenz, in 1902 declared it more beautiful than the Rhine, which depends on the castles on its banks for its main charm. Primarily, the beauty of the Hudson is due to the extraordinary range of its geological history. From its source to the sea it is an epitome of creation. It rises in the Adirondack mountains, which tower to a great height. The famous Highlands of the Hudson, between which Hudson sailed 300 years ago, are of the same Archaean rocks and were once a group of islands. The Catskills are more modern and the Palisades still younger. The latter rising sheer 300 to 500 feet above the water's edge, were once a fiery molten mass and their columnar shape is due to the manner in which the mass cooled off.

These facts indicate what a storehouse for fascinating research the Hudson valley is for the person, young or old, who will study it with the mind as well as with the eye.—Edith Townsend Kaufmann in Leslie's.

SOLONS AND SALARIES.

Some European States Pay Their Lawmakers Only a Mite.

Italy and Spain are the only European countries which offer no monetary reward to their members of parliament. The Portuguese legislators are not remunerated by the state, but they have a free pass for traveling on all railways in the country, and their constituencies are permitted to pay a sum equivalent to 15 shillings for each day's sitting.

Denmark is another country which believes that its political gentlemen are ready to work for almost nothing. Members of parliament there only receive 6 shillings per day, but they have the peculiar privilege of a free seat in the Royal theater in Copenhagen.

The Norwegian honorable member is thankful for a daily income of 12 shillings, though he must do his duty properly to get it. He loses a day's pay when he takes a day off. Members of the Swiss diet work under the same threat. If they are absent they lose salary which amounts in their case to 16 shillings per day.

Roumania pays her lawmakers a sovereign per day, and Bulgaria offers 16 shillings. In the latter country members living in the capital have 4 shillings deducted because they have no train fares to pay and only one home to keep up.

Hungary treats her statesmen just half as well as England does, allowing them £200 per annum. They have, however, a liberal allowance for house rent and can travel first class with second class tickets.—London Tit-Bits.

Keeping Your Word.

The following quotation from De Morgan's "When Ghost Meets Ghost" may help a few to see the moral issue more clearly. Mr. Jerry began feebly, "You can't do more than keep your word, Ma." • • • Ma, a fine old ex-prizefighter, replies:

"Yes, you can, Jerry. You can keep your meanin'. And you can do more than that. You can keep to what the other party thought you meant, when you know. I know this time. I ain't in a court o' justice, Jerry, dodgin' about, and I know when I'm square by the feel."

Played With Fire Balls.

For many centuries polo, or chaugan, as it was then called, was a favorite pastime with Asiatic rulers. A contemporary annalist records of Akbar, the greatest of Mogul emperors, that "he plays at chaugan on dark nights, the balls being set on fire. For the sake of adding splendor to the game his majesty has knobs of gold and silver fixed to the chaugan sticks. If one of these breaks any player that gets hold of the pieces may keep them."

Weight of a Gallon of Milk.

"What is the standard weight for sweet milk?"

A quart of milk weighs 2.153 pounds and a gallon 8.612 pounds, or a quart 2.15 pounds and a gallon 8.6 pounds. It is understood that the temperature of the milk and the relative proportions of the butter fat and solids not butter fat cause the weight of milk to vary, but the weights stated above are those generally used.—Progressive Farmer.

From Stenographer to Advertising Manager

Mr. A. L. R. of Hingham, Mass., finished the Combined Course at Burdett College in 1911. The College obtained him a position as stenographer with a Boston firm doing a business of several million dollars a year. Later he became assistant advertising manager for a large house. His former employers recently offered him the position of advertising manager for New England, which he accepted.

Stenography proved the stepping-stone to a higher position. Burdett College specializes in training secretaries or understudies for men of big affairs.

Not only in stenography, but in all the subjects of business education, Burdett College qualifies students to compete for the better grade of positions.

The courses are: Applied Business and Management, Business, Combined, Shorthand, Secretarial, Normal and Finishing.

A good Position provided every graduate. Fall term begins Sept. 8.

HE ENFORCED THE RULE.

But In Doing It Grant Proved His Good Hearted Nature.

General Grant was a kind and warm hearted man in spite of a certain brusqueness of manner. A story that General Logan used often to tell is to the point.

At the time General Logan was with General Grant at Holly Springs, Miss., General Forrest, the Confederate cavalry leader, had just captured a train of supplies, and General Grant had issued an order to his men to scour the country for twenty miles round in order to get food for his troops. The country had already been swept pretty clean, and the new demands brought a good deal of hardship on the people of the neighborhood. At many of the homes there were only women, old men, children and faithful colored servants. These people, hungry and without money to buy provisions, were often forced to apply to the northern army in their distress. Food was always given them if they would take the oath of allegiance to the United States.

One day a rickety carriage drew up before General Grant's headquarters, and from it alighted an elderly woman and her colored driver. The woman was admitted to the tent, and the servant stood just inside the tent flap. Only a few words were necessary to explain matters. The woman's home had been ravaged by troops, both blue and gray, and she and her servants needed food. The soft voiced woman spoke of her humiliation at having to beg for food, and added that she made the request more for her servants than for herself. "I am willing to suffer everything for the south," she said, "but I can't see our people starve."

An officer who had charge of such cases told the woman that she should have food if she would sign the oath of allegiance. "I cannot do that," she said. "My husband and three sons are fighting under the Confederate flag. I thank you, sir, for listening to me."

The woman turned to leave. General Grant, who had been writing at a table in one corner of the tent, glanced up from his papers. He called to the negro:

"Sam, did you ever hear of Abraham Lincoln?"

"Yassuh, gen'ral."

"Do you know that he is trying to free you colored people?"

"Yassuh, Ah knows it."

"Are you willing to take sides with Abraham Lincoln—to take the oath of allegiance to the United States?"

"Yassuh, gen'ral, Ah's willin' ter do dat."

General Grant turned to the officer who had talked with the woman. "Administer the oath to Sam," he said, "and give him the provisions. See that he gets plenty."

The rickety old carriage with its escort of soldiers passed through the Union lines a short time afterward, laden to the seats with provisions, and Sam, probably thinking less of his oath than of the supper to come, grinned from ear to ear as he urged the two mules to a faster gait.

Require No Logic.

TRAPPING ELEPHANTS.

In India Tame Animals Aid In Capturing the Wild Ones.

In view of the vast strength possessed by full grown elephants, it seems at first sight almost incredible that they can be captured in herds and quickly subdued to the will of their masters.

At the present time, in Mysore, the regular method of capturing wild elephants is for a large number of natives to go into the jungle, some mounted on tamed elephants and many on foot, and to make a great noise and hullabaloo, which results in driving herds of the wild elephants into stockades, or often into ponds of water, which have previously been surrounded on all sides, except at the approaches, by immensely strong palisades. As soon as the herd is cornered the passages that had been left open are securely closed, and then the trained elephants are brought into play to cajole and subdue the perplexed prisoners.

In India elephants are no longer captured, as they still are in Africa, by means of huge pitfalls in the ground. In these traps they are often seriously injured or killed. The Indian elephant is somewhat smaller than the African and differs from it in other ways—as, for instance, in the fact that tusks are possessed only by the males, while both sexes are provided with them in Africa. In general, also, the tusks of African elephants are nearly twice as large as those of their Indian relatives, a single pair sometimes weighing as much as 250 or 300 pounds.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

WAGNER'S "PARSIFAL."

Its Cold Reception at First Moved Hans Sachs to Fury.

When Wagner's "Parsifal" was first performed in Baireuth, the critic Hans Sachs was almost the only one of all the writing fraternity to welcome it as a great work of genius. To the ears of the others its rude realism sounded unmusical. They wanted melody like that Verdi was turning out in Italy, Bizet in Paris and a few minor composers in their own Berlin.

But Sachs was a man of broader mold. He heard the great music of "Parsifal" with unprejudiced ears and recognized the genius of the man. He shouted it abroad in his writings and became furious at a world that would not, perhaps could not, find pleasure in the dramatic voices of the orchestra, its vivid emotionalism and marvelous appeal to the aesthetical nature that is in every man and woman. He knew that the Germans were merely refusing to listen, save for melody, and finally he told them that even in the melodic field Wagner was the greatest of them all.

Sachs has written eloquently of Wagner's melody, beside which the melody of the Italians is pallid, anaemic, insignificant. Only now and then, he said, were the Italian melodists other than artificial. Wagner's melody was the spontaneous song of a musical heart. The "Good Friday Spell" was the most exquisite song of praise ever written by any man, no less a song because it was wordless, sung only by the violin and woodwinds.—Detroit Free Press.

Praise for English Schools.

"Whatever else we may say about the English schools, they do turn out well-behaved orderly boys and girls, respectful to those set over them, grounded in the morals of Christian civilization, with an instinctive sense of obedience to law and a becoming regard for the authorities that represent it. Would we be any the worse off if we had more of these qualities here?"—Whitelaw Reid.

Mortgagee's Sale

By virtue of and pursuant to the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Mary E. Jenkins to Elias S. Beals, dated September 8, 1893, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, Book 700, Page 491, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction on the premises hereinafter described on Monday, the seventeenth day of August, A. D. 1914 at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage and therein described as follows, viz:

A certain parcel of land with all the buildings thereon standing, including a dwelliug house and stable, situated on North street in Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bounded and described as follows: Easterly by said North street, thereon measuring five (5) rods and twenty and one quarter (20 1-4) links; southerly by land of the heirs of John E. Battles, deceased, thereon measuring seventeen (17) rods and sixteen and one half (16 1-2) links; westerly by land of Sarah L. and Lewis A. Beals, thereon measuring five (5) rods and twenty and one quarter (20 1-4) links; and northerly by land of the heirs of William Bicknell, deceased, there measuring seventeen (17) rods and fifteen and one half (15 1-2) links.

Said premises will be sold subject to a mortgage given to the East Weymouth Savings Bank, dated September 24, 1887, for two thousand dollars, and also subject to any and all unpaid taxes.

Terms made known at time of sale.

A Woman's Affair

By F. A. MITCHEL

The women artists of Berlin every two years get up a ball in which only women are allowed. Not a single man is admitted. A large number of the women, however, don male attire, and it is an imitation of men's attentions to the fair sex on the part of these female men that occasions the chief diversion of the evening.

Now, in Berlin lived a young man named Kerstner—Herman Kerstner—who was a scribbler. He wrote stories sitting in his window overlooking the garden at the back of the house, while a girl painted pictures at another window at the back of another house on the other end of the same garden. Louisa Beninger painted for the love of art; Kerstner wrote for bread and butter.

It was just as natural for these two to come into communication as for the grass to grow. It was not long before a system of telegraphy was established between them, and the messages that came over the wires were those usual between lovers. Gladly would the young man have gone to see the fraulein, but she, not being permitted to meet any one of whom her parents did not approve, did not ask him.

One day the girl telegraphed that she was going to the artist women's fete. She would not be allowed to go alone; her mother would go with her.

An idea occurred to Herman. If he could go to the ball impersonating a woman in man's dress he could clasp his Louisa to him in the dance instead of looking at her from a distance. This he telegraphed her and observed that after she received his message she did a great deal of thinking. Then she got up and went away from the window, and when she returned she dropped something white on to the ground below. The day was fading, and as soon as it was dark Herman went out of a door opening into the garden, jumped over a fence and, under Louisa's window, picked up a ticket. Going back to his home he looked at it by lamplight. It read:

Admit Fraulein Louisa Meninger to the artist women's fete.

Herman's heart danced with delight. He was ready to take any risk. There were but a few hairs on his face, and his cheeks were red as two Jacqueminot roses. His mouth was delicate, and he wore a lady's No. 6 kid glove.

Appropriating a costume of his sister's, on the night of the ball he went there in a carriage and was admitted on Fraulein Meninger's ticket. Having gained an entrance, the room was free to him. He looked about him till he saw her with her mother, then went boldly up to her. So long as he was supposed to be a woman the field was perfectly clear to him. He and Louisa ran away where they might be free to talk together without being overheard.

Now, if Herman Kerstner had been older or less in love—at any rate, had had his wits about him—he would have seen the impropriety of thus going where only women were expected, or, having knowingly incurred the consequences, he would have been every moment on his guard. Instead of this, he led the fraulein away to a window seat, pulled the curtains in front of them and proceeded to make love without considering that if not seen he might at least be heard. As his ardor waxed stronger his voice grew louder. A couple of girls passing heard, listened and, going to the manager of the ball, told that a man was present.

There is a certain faculty peculiar to women—the faculty of listening to two speakers at once—that must have been possessed to a marked degree by Fraulein Louisa, for she not only heard Herman making love to her; but, her eyes and ears being open, she was cognizant that the two girls had gone off to inform on her lover. She threw up the sash and by means of a light shawl she carried let him down from the window, which was on the second story, to the ground. Then she closed the window and was walking unconcernedly across the floor, where she saw the managers hurrying to the retreat from which she and her lover had just escaped.

Confident that, having been sitting in the dark, she had not been seen and realizing that there is safety in a bold front, she followed in the wake of the outraged managers, and when they pulled aside the curtains, expecting to find a victim, or, rather, the victims, and were disappointed, she joined in the babel of inquiries as to what was the matter.

The girls who had furnished the information were firm in their belief that they had heard lovemaking which could have come only from a man. Imitation lovemaking was common in the ballrooms, and the managers were convinced that the informers had mistaken one of these cases for the genuine article. It was much better to put this construction on the matter than to probe it further at the risk of bringing about a scandal. This was fortunate for Fraulein Louisa, she having called for a duplicate ticket on the ground that she had mislaid the one sent her.

It is not to be supposed that a love affair involving so much assurance and resource would come to naught. It ended in an elopement, the pair were married, and Frau Kerstner returned with her husband to her home and was forgiven.

IRVING'S HEAD.

Why the Spot That Washington Touched Could Not Be Seen.

Among Dr. George Haven Putnam's early recollections was a meeting with Washington Irving. He tells of it in his "Memories of My Youth." The Irving home was near Yonkers and the Putnam family occasionally visited their neighbors. Dr. Putnam remembers one Sunday afternoon when his father was busy arranging some of Mr. Irving's papers and the old gentleman took pains to give him some word about his own childhood. "His mother told him some years later, when he was old enough to be interested in historical events and personages, that when he was a year old the nurse, taking him out in his baby carriage, saw at the corner of Broadway General Washington passing by on horseback. The nurse, holding up the little boy, called out to the general that here was a boy that had been named after him, and she hoped that the general would be willing to give the boy his blessing.

"Little Washingtons were not so plenty in 1784 as they became in later years, and the general was quite ready to delay his ride for the purpose of giving a greeting to his little namesake. He took the boy up on the saddle and, placing his hand upon the little one's head, gave him a formal blessing. I looked up with interest at the head that had been touched by Washington, and then found myself perplexed at Mr. Irving's word that I should not see the spot on which the general's hand had rested.

"I spoke to my father afterward about the incident, and he said, 'Why, you stupid, don't you know that Mr. Irving wears a wig?'"

EMPEROR PENGUINS.

Very Ceremonious They Are With Their Bows and Speeches.

In Sir Ernest Shackleton's "The Heart of the Antarctic" there is a chapter by James Murray, the biologist of the expedition, on those queer creatures, the penguins. The following is an extract:

"Their resemblance to human beings is always noticed. This is partly due to their habit of walking erect, but there are truly a great many human traits about them. They are the civilized natives of these regions.

"Emperor penguins are very ceremonious in meeting other Emperors or men or dogs. They come up to a party of strangers in a straggling procession, some big, important, aldermanic fellow leading. At a respectful distance from the man or dog they halt, the old male waddles up and bows gravely till his beak almost touches his breast. Keeping his head bowed, he makes a long speech in a muttering manner, short sounds following in groups of four or five. Having finished the speech, the head is still kept bowed a few seconds for politeness' sake, then it is raised, and he looks in your face to see if you have understood. If you have not comprehended, as is usually the case, he tries again. He is very patient with your stupidity.

"Their most solemn ceremonies were used toward the dogs, and three old fellows have been seen calmly bowing and speaking simultaneously to a dog, which, for its part, was yelping and straining at its chain in the effort to get at them."

The Provencal Tongue.

Mistral, the great Provencal poet, has been likened to Robert Burns for the work he did. But Burns' task was child's play compared with Mistral's. The Scottish poet found his language fully grown and completely alive; Mistral had to create his means of expression. Provencal had lost every resemblance to a literary tongue, and the new poet-patriot had to mold it afresh, to recreate and to build up on the ruins left by the vineyard and the farm. "Our Provencal," said Mistral, "was a country lass, ragged and wild." She is now a wonderfully beautiful creature, but it is doubtful whether all the genius of Mistral can keep her alive. The educational reformer in France does not like such irregular beauty.—Chicago News.

Newspaper Reporters.

I have always had great sympathy for newspaper reporters—a class of men generally about equally feared and criticised. During a large part of my life since my graduation I have been brought in constant contact with the men of this profession. Only on rare occasions have I suffered at their hands serious injustice, due either to deliberate intent or to gross misunderstanding. I have generally found them courteous and considerate, honestly desirous of getting the truth and of reporting it accurately.—Abbott's "Reminiscences" in Outlook.

Regret.

Regret is a dangerous thing. You let a little one no bigger than a mustard seed into your heart, and before you know it you've hatched out a whole brood. Everything is woven into a pattern of the whole, and the Lord knew the figure he had in mind. —Ellen Glasgow.

She Bolted.

"What did your wife say when she saw you dance three times with that pretty young woman?"

"Nothing. She just bolted the party."—Detroit Free Press.

The Single Thought.

Stella—Were you two souls with but a single thought? Bella—That was just the trouble; he wanted to stay single.—New York Sun.

FRIDAY, AUG. 7, 1914

☞The Gazette & Transcript is printed and mailed Friday afternoons, and is for sale at all News-stands in the Weymouths and at the South Terminal, Boston.

All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpublished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.

Notices of all local entertainments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 10 cents per line in the reading matter, or regular rates in the advertising columns.

Inquiry to our moth and police department—Is there any spray less than bird shot which will preserve fruits of any kind after the ripening process begins?

If you are taking a vacation have the Gazette sent to your outing address. This is what one friend said of it last week, "What was the matter with last week's Gazette? I did not get it. I think a deal of the Gazette when at home and a deal more when away, and I had rather have gone without my beans on Saturday night than the paper."

The most recent bulleting in regard to the present wheat crop says 930,000,000 bushels in addition to which there is still on hand from immense amount of 1913 wheat and the average main fails to see why the staff of life should go jumping up in price when there is a two years supply for all food demands. How about the law which prohibits cornering or gambling in food stuff.

In these days when housewives are taking a week or two from home and leaving the man of the house to do his own catering, some of them are gathering knowledge. One man has discovered that potatoes fried in water tastes the same as when boiled. Another has discovered that however well the cat may be trained, it is hardly safe to leave it shut up any great length of time with his choice steak open for inspection.

Crop reports from Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina tell of good apple crops, the report from Michigan says "an unusual crop" and Colorado the largest crop in the history of that state.

These reports are encouraging but there is no section of the country which grows apple as rich in flavor or of so good keeping qualities as New England. This last statement "keeping qualities" should however be taken with the proviso—Should you be fortunate enough to get ahead of the other fellow at gathering time.

PEACE AND WAR.

Nothing is so amazing in this world as the optimism of pacificists, who sit down in the camps of a world armed 'cap-a-pie' and dream of peace; who walk through continence glittering with bayonets and echoing with the rumbling of cannon and caisson, and prohesy the Millennium; who listen to the tramp of marching millions and the thunder of celvary and artillery and fatuously tell us that grim-visaged war is passing and the days of perpetual peace are at hand.

How futile it all seems; and yet the preachers of peace are good men and true, whose enthusiasm outruns their common sense and whose zeal for peace blinds them to the weaknesses and limitations of human kind and leads them to ignore the potential cave man that lies under the skin of every civilized creature. Man is a fighting animal; we have restrained his savage impulses by laws, customs and education; we have made him a measurably peaceful creature in his individual capacity, but in his collective and national capacity he still remains a fighter. As between man and man we have substituted courts and laws and public opinion for private battle; the duellist is laughed at; the bully is the scorn of his fellows; the gun man gets but scant mercy; and yet despite the change of individual point of view, wholesale battle, war, remains the final appeal in all quarrels great and small between nations.

In the ages yet unborn war may pass out of the experience of humanity and become only a black tradition; but in the meantime men must be made over, and the soul of the race be purged of the mark of the beast.

Meantime the Palace of Peace at The Hague is to let, and if the necessities of war demand it the contending armies of France and Germany will laugh at the neutral rights of Holland, stable their horses in the Palace and park their artillery in the streets of The Hague.—Truth.

REVENUE CUTTER SERVICE.

How It Came to Be Placed Under the Treasury Department.

The United States revenue cutter service is a military arm of the government attached to and under the direction of the treasury department. The service was organized in 1790 and constituted the original naval force of the country. There was at that time no navy department, and the service was placed under the treasury department, where it has remained ever since.

It is charged with the enforcement of the navigation and customs laws of the United States, the assistance of vessels in distress, the protection of the sealing industry in Alaska, the enforcement of the quarantine laws, the destruction of derelicts and other floating dangers to navigation and numerous other duties appropriate to its class of vessels. Each winter, by direction of the president, a number of the cutters patrol the coast for the special purpose of assisting vessels in distress.

The service co-operates with the navy when directed by the president and has so co-operated in every war in which the United States has been engaged. It is sometimes called the revenue marine service, but revenue cutter service is the proper name. There are forty-three cutters in the service, and they carry from one to five or six guns each.—Philadelphia Press.

HYGIENE IN THE DESERT.

Our Latter Day Methods Were an Open Book to Moses.

Nothing under the sun is new. Facts have proved that even the pitch which hygiene has reached at the present day was equaled and in many instances excelled under the laws of Moses.

The particular and careful manner in which animals are slaughtered according to the laws of the Talmud is acknowledged today to be the most sanitary method possible.

Professor Koch gave to the world the valuable results of his investigations in bacteriology, but several thousand years before that the Mosaic law pointed out the danger to humanity from tuberculosis in cattle, but did not forbid poultry as food. It was not many years ago that specialists discovered that fowl tuberculosis was harmless to man.

The yearly exodus to the country and seaside is no new innovation. Moses, the great lawgiver, prescribed not only feasting at certain seasons of the year, but the removal of whole families to great camping grounds in the open spaces, where they could live near to nature.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Chinaman on the Opium Habit.

In the American Magazine appears an article entitled "A Modern Opium Eater," written by a newspaper man, who became a victim of the habit and is now a convict in a penitentiary. In the course of the article the author quotes as follows what a Chinese den keeper said to him about the power of the habit to hold its victims:

"You no quit. Every man alleetime say he quit. Every man alleesame you. Smoke one time, smoke two time, smoke tlee time, then smoke alleetime. Chineman, white man, chokquay (negro) alleesame. No can quit. Bimeby you die you quit. Bimeby maybe you bloke—no more money, no more fiend bollow money, no can stealem money, maybe you quit one, two days. Bimeby maybe you go jail, no got fiend bling you hop, no got money givem policeman catchem hop, you quit. You got money, no go jail, you no quit. I heap sabe. Bimeby you see."

The Facile Mexican.

In the opening paragraph of one of his best stories Kipling wrote: "Let it be clearly understood that the Russian is a delightful person till he tucks his shirt in. As an oriental he is charming. It is only when he insists on being treated as the most easterly of western peoples that he becomes a radical anomaly, extremely difficult to handle. The host never knows which side of his nature is going to turn up next." There is a somewhat similar difficulty with the Mexican. He can be charming, but one never knows whether he is the most northern southerner or the most southern northerner, and he can change from one to the other with a facility that is almost genius.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Studied It Out.

One day two farm laborers were discussing the wiseness of the present generation. Said the first:

"We be wiser than our fathers was, and they were wiser than their fathers was."

The second one, after pondering a while and gazing at his companion, replied:

"Well, Garge, what a fule thy grandfather must 'a' been!"—London Express.

Wise In One Way.

"I don't want to brag about myself. I've done many foolish things in my time, but I've been wise in one way."

"What's that?"

"I never had the idea that I could paper a bedroom myself."—Detroit Free Press.

Repentance.

If our past actions reproach us they cannot be atoned for by our own severe reflections so effectually as by a contrary behavior.—Steele.

Remedy for Drowsiness.

Drowsiness during the day, if a person has slept well the night before, is often caused by indigestion. Often this is remedied by drinking something very hot like cocoa or coffee. The brain needs a mild stimulant. Lassitude of the body is not always an indication of illness or laziness.

Worst Yet to Come.

"I hate to leave the old place," remarked Adam as he turned from the Garden of Eden. "Leaving isn't the worst of it," replied Eve. "Think of the trouble you're going to have when you get to telling of the animals and rivers in this place to the explorers and geographical experts over yonder."—Washington Star.

POND PLAIN

A Place of Rapid Development and Improvement.

Well authenticate history places the first permanent settlement by the white man in Weymouth to have been in 1623.

Some locate the place of landing in one spot and some in another. It was undoubtly some where on the shore line of North Weymouth and having established his early home the next move was to explore his surrounding and develop this country.

These developments followed along Indian tracks and among them a trail which led from North Weymouth to Buzzards Bay and at the southern Weymouth extremely of one of these trails there grew up many of the most influencing people of the town and the name Blanchard, Poole, Derby, Paine was synonymous of good citizenship.

We might say much of those noble pioneers and their descendants but that is not what we started to do. We find that men, women and children of Pond Plain came and went for 268 years over the "Old Indian Trail," somewhat modified and dignified by the name of street or road without even the resemblance of a sidewalk, people walking in the middle of the street or the wet grass along the side.

As we say, for 268 years and then the records say that in 1891 the first sidewalk was built on Pond street. Twenty-three years and what a change, not only one little new gavel walk with a small line of demarcation from the main road, but a magic transformation into a beautiful street with shade trees and many new up to date houses with all modern improvements. In short, the Pond Plain Improvement society has made more rapid strides for village betterment in the last two decades than any other organization in town.

AN UNLUCKY BRIG.

Once Abandoned, the Marie Celeste Came to a Bad End.

There are few people who have not heard of the case of the American brig Marie Celeste, which in 1872 was inexplicably abandoned in calm weather off the Azores by a crew never after heard from. Few, however, know that it ended its career many years later at the hands of the barrator.

On its last voyage it cleared from Boston for Port au Prince, Haiti, ostensibly with a cargo of valuable general merchandise, insured for $30,000. When within a few miles of its destination it went ashore near Miragoane and became a total wreck. The captain, Parker, promptly sold the cargo, sight unseen, to American Consul Mitchell for $500. Mitchell saved it at some trouble, but lived to wish he hadn't.

When the underwriters' agent arrived on the scene to investigate, he found several funny things about the cargo. One case shipped as cutlery and insured for $1,000 contained dog collars worth $50. Barrels supposed to contain expensive liquors were full of worthless dregs, a consignment of salt fish insured for $5,000 was rotten, and other articles mentioned in the bill of lading proved to be in keeping.

Consul Mitchell, not only duped, but outlawed, stood not on the order of his going, but cleared out for tall timber. The captain of the brig was tried in the United States district court in Boston, convicted and sentenced to a long term in prison, where he died three months later.—David A. Wasson in Outing Magazine.

The Trained Voice.

Lawyers, clergymen and doctors all fail to secure the influence with the people with whom they come in contact because of inability to express their thoughts in an impressive way. Had the voice been trained the same as the eye and the intellect, had the exterior qualities been trained to express like the voice the best and the clearest facts, they would all have been successes. The melodious voice of Henry Clay always charmed his audience everywhere. Wherever he went people flocked to hear him, while the heavy bass tones of Daniel Webster failed to attract and actually drove people away. They preferred to read what he had to say, but wanted personally to hear Clay's pleasing voice.—Medical Record.

Fuller's Great Memory.

Thomas Fuller, the author of "The Worthies of England," possessed the useful accomplishment for a clergyman of being able to repeat a sermon verbatim after hearing it only once. Fuller once succeeded in naming backward and forward and without a single omission every shop sign on both sides of the way from Temple Bar to the eastern extremity of Cheapside. This appears a remarkable feat when it is remembered that Fuller lived before the practice of numbering houses was adopted, so that every shop he passed bore a sign.—London Chronicle.

Savage Game In India.

In the province of Sind, India, there are more than 3,513,000 people, and yet there are occasional tigers, panthers, leopards, wolves and hyenas. The gad, or wild sheep, the ibex, the chinker, the black buck and the hog deer are comparatively common.

Still Possible.

"Uncle, can't I be a pirate when I grow up?"

"Sure you can, son. What do you want to pirate—books or plays?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Griggs—The doctor said I must throw up everything and take a sea voyage. Briggs—Got the cart before the horse, didn't he?—Boston Transcript.

If we have done our best to do and to be, we can rest in peace.—Sir John Lubbock.

The Sweetest Days.

After all, I believe the nicest and sweetest days are not those on which anything very splendid or wonderful or exciting happens, but just those that bring simple little pleasures, following one another softly, like pearls slipping off a string.—L. M. Montgomery.

Professional Training.

"Oh, Johnnie, can't I ever teach you to put things away?"

"But, mother, I'm practicing to be a salesman, not a stock clerk."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

When men are rightly occupied their amusement grows out of their work, as the color petals out of a fruitful flower.—John Ruskin.

Do not use wooden dringing fountains for poultry. Wood is a germ breeder.

Successful pruning cannot be learned at once from reading instructions. Experience gained from practice and observation is neccessary to do the best work.

The early crop of cabbage should be all harvested during this month, and the land sown to rye, vetch, or other legume, to be turned under, next spring, as green manure.

Late this month, cut the tops from the asparagus and burn them. Cut close to the ground, so as not to leave any stumps on which to injure the cutter when harvesting the shoots next spring.

A good dairy bull should be kept until he is twelve or fifteen years old; in fact, as long as he is a sure sire. Real good sires are so rare that when we do find one he should die only of old age.

There is less waste in feeding silage than in feeding fodder. Good silage properly fed is all consumed. Silage is very palatable and, like other succulent feeds, has a beneficial effect upon the digestive organs. More stock can be kept on a given area of land when silage is the basis of the ration.

The productive life of the average hen is only two years. Some hens are good layers at three and four years, but these are exceptions to the rule. As a general thing it will not pay to keep a hen after she is three years old.

Right now in the middle of the summer is the time to force maturity of pullets for early fall and winter laying. They must be fed, watered and handled to make large and rapid growth of bone and flesh with the least amount possible of fat. Straight growth is what is wanted.

To milk a cow requires time and patience. The milk should be drawn slowly and steadily. Some cows have very tender teats, and if you want a well disposed cow, be gentle in your treatment towards her. A good cow is naturally impatient. With constant irritation, any cow will fail in quantity of milk.

Beautifyiug the farm home seldom requires more than a small outlay of money and not so very much of time. The ordinary farm house, painted and in good repair, standing in the midst of a green lawn, with shrubbery and large shade trees interspersed here and there, makes a picturesque scene. The barns and outbuildings, though of ordinary construction, may have a neat appearance; and a little paint, simply applied by the farmer himself.

April and May pullets can be made to mature and begin laying in September or October if they are fed well during the summer months. That means that they are not compelled to forage all their living but be hand-fed twice daily all through their growing period. Some have the notion that young chickens can always forage all the good feed they can consume during the summer.

It is useless to expect to build up a paying business without adopting business methods. The poultry business bears a strong resemblance to the business of manufacturing goods, and to be put upon a paying basis, attention must be giveu to certain well-known principles—quality of goods, cost of production and the obtaining of a market.

If all parties using the public roads owned wide-tired wagons, the roads in the main would be in a much better condition as has been demonstrated in sections where such wagons are now in general use. Not only does the use of wide-tired wagons make and maintain a smoother road surface, but such wagons run easier and do less damage in fields and on the farm in general.

Land that will produce excessively heavy crops is full of rich plant foods in such a form that the growing crops can readily take up the plant foods for growth. A tract of newly cleared timber land covered with rotten leaves, rotten logs, rotten stumps of trees and brush, is fertile land, but the fertility is bunched and scattered. Good crops can not be grown on such land till the soil and its covering are turned and stirred to mix the surface fertilizers.

Almost any soil is improved by deep and thorough stirring yet soil filled with manure and other organic matter is benefited more in proportion. The point is that in stirring soil for profit there must be something in the soil to make it worth while to stir. It pays well to mix the soil much if there is something in the soil to be mixed. The commonest kind of land can be built up and be made wonderfully productive if it is heavily manured, treated with needed commercial fertilizer and then all eternally mixed together.

Argentine Peach Trees.

There are five varieties of peach trees in Argentina; the juicy early American downy-skinned peach, the clingstone downy peach, the slipstone nonadherent peach, and two nectarines. The peach thrives over a vast zone, extending as far north as the subtropical regions. It is to be found in the southern Andean, Pampean and Maritime regions, but peach groves occur in largest number along the extensive stretch of territory lying between Buenos Aires and Mendoza.

To the Honorable the Board of Selectmen of Weymouth.

Respectfully represents the Bay State Street Railway Company:

That it owns and operates street railway tracks in Weymouth and desires an extension, alteration and relocation thereof in Washington and Broad Streets in said Weymouth:

Wherefore, your petitioners, as such Street Railway Company, prays for an extension, alteration and relocation of its tracks in Washington and Broad Streets, constituting a double track location, from a point at or near the junction of Washington and Commercial Streets to a point in Washington Street at or near the end of the State Highway layout, southerly of Lincoln Square, so called, and in Broad Street not to exceed 200 feet easterly of Lincoln Square, so called, together with such switches, curves and cross connections as may be necessary or convenient for the operation of the cars of said Company, substantially as shown on plans filed with this petition, and to make all necessary additions to and change in poles, wires and other appliances connected therewith, and that it be granted the right to operate said tracks with electricity as the motive power.

BAY STATE STREET RAILWAY COMPANY,
By P. F. Sullivan, President.

Weymouth, Mass., August 3, 1914.

Office of the Selectmen of Weymouth.
August 3, 1914.

Upon consideration of the foregoing petition, at a meeting of the board of Selectmen of Weymouth, held as above, it was ordered: That a public hearing be held at the office of the Selectmen of Weymouth on Tuesday, August twenty-fifth, nineteen hundred and fourteen at 7.30 o'clock p. m., for the consideration of the foregoing petition and this order thereon, and that notice of said hearing be given by publishing the same in the Weymouth Gazette and the Weymouth Times, newspapers published in said Weymouth and by serving the same by copy upon the clerk of the Bay State Street Railway Company fourteen days at least before the date of said hearing.

By order of the
SELECTMEN OF WEYMOUTH,
Bradford Hawes, Secretary.

RACING FOR SLEEP.

Running Around the Bed Is Said to Induce Drowsiness.

There is nothing in the world quite as exasperating as not being able to go to sleep when you want to, and persistent insomnia is one of the greatest curses of mankind. But many people suffer from insomnia from lack of knowing many of the simple devices that have been used in the past to provoke sleep, and Sir James Sawyer in a recent work points out how valuable some of these simple means have been.

Few plans are more successful, he suggests, than that of running around the bed, particularly if the night is cold. It will be remembered that Charles Dickens, who was greatly afflicted with sleeplessness, declared that if he could lean on the bedpost in thin attire, in which he usually slept, until he got chilled clear through the return to a warm bed would produce a drowsiness that led him along the path of sleep.

William Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, was a believer in the circulation of the bed also. He declared that for sleeplessness nothing was better than to jump out of bed suddenly, as though frightened, race around the bed with very little on until the skin was cold and the body heated and then jump back into bed. Not only was the exercise good, he believed, but also the feeling that one was being withheld from going to bed caused a desire for it, which prepared the mind for sleep when once more lying down.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WAR IS WHAT?

Some Varied Points of View That Reach Far, Far Apart.

The Enlisted Man—A chance to break the deadly routine of the parade ground with some real excitement. In isolated cases to provide opportunities for military or political advancement.

The Business Man—A period of economical depression, often followed by large failures and the consequent loss of the public's investments.

The Volunteer—A stern patriotic duty to be entered upon without inquiry as to its justice or injustice.

The Philosopher—An unintelligent and gross instrument for the settlement of the world's unavoidable quarrels.

The Historian—A logical, if somewhat regrettable, method of arranging the world's boundary lines.

The Optimist—The natural strife of humanity, tending toward the general betterment of the social cosmos.

The Pessimist—The natural strife of humanity, tending toward the general destruction of the universe.

The Mother—A long vigil in an empty room and a memory of child voices forever stilled.

The Wife—A husband gone, a home destroyed and a woman's heart broken.

The Seer—The last great barrier between civilization and the millennium.—Life.

Continental English.

The idea that English is to be the universal language of the future seems to be spreading. Certainly thousands of Europeans struggle bravely with its rules and idioms. Here is a sample of the progress that has been made in one quarter. It is taken from the advertising matter that a large continental hotel publishes in the form of an elaborate illustrated booklet:

"Its spacious dimensions, exquisite comfort, elegant fashion of its furnishing, the unobjectionable prerogatives as to the produces of its kitchen and contents of its cellars, beside the distinguished managing, which, assisted by well experienced attendants, does its utmost in always duly treating—all this united already for many years past obtained a general renown, even abroad too."

L'Aiglon's Grave Neglected.

"L'Aiglon," the son of Napoleon, was unfortunate throughout his brief life, and his very memory is now neglected. He lies buried in Vienna, and his tomb is described by the correspondent of a French contemporary as a "melancholy spectacle." Only a copper plate attests to the fact that the little king of Rome is buried there, and not a flower decks the grave. This neglect is the more vivid inasmuch as the surrounding royal tombs, including that of his mother, who was an Austrian, are richly ornamented and surrounded with a luxurious growth of flowers.—London Globe.

A Late Book.

Mrs. Hoyt, who became the possessor of a fortune by the death of an aunt, did not like to admit her ignorance of any subject.

One afternoon she had a call from a prominent society woman, and the conversation turned upon books.

"Have you read Shakespeare's works?" asked the caller.

"Oh, yes, indeed," replied Mrs. Hoyt, "all of them—that is," she added hastily, "unless he has written something very lately."—National Monthly.

Not Good at Figures.

Lady Canvasser—I've called to ask you to give us something for the O. P. O. S. The— Old Gentleman—My dear lady, I already give away one-tenth of my income. Lady Canvasser—Oh, just this year couldn't you make it an eleventh?—London Punch.

Great Luck.

"Hello, Dobson! Any luck yesterday when you were fishing?"

"Great! I was away when six bill collectors called."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Temperance and labor are the two real physicians of man.—Rousseau.

An Episode Of Mexico

By ESTHER VANDERVEER

A girl sat sewing in her room in the City of Mexico. Hearing a footstep on the stairs, she started. A woman entered out of breath.

"Inez!" she gasped.

"Oh, Pepita! What is it?"

"If you have anything to compromise you with the Constitutionalists get rid of it at once. This man Manuel Coral, whom you have trusted, is a spy of the dictator. He has informed upon you."

"Then what use to get rid of evidence? The dictator does not need evidence to get rid of his victims."

"Coral's brother, Enrique, came to me and said to me: 'I have just learned that Manuel is in the secret service of the dictator and has informed the tyrant that by searching Inez's room he will find papers revealing the plan of the revolutionists.' Enrique assured me that if no such papers are found you will not be troubled. If they are found it will go hard with you, even though you are a woman."

Inez burst into tears. The man she loved had turned traitor to her. But her friend urged her to waste no time in getting rid of any compromising documents she might possess. She did possess several important ones, for her brother was one of the revolutionary chiefs, and he was using her to lay plans for a rising against the dictator in the City of Mexico. But Inez had received too terrible a blow in the treachery of her lover to keep her mind on what she was doing. After she had destroyed every document, as she supposed, she remembered one she had not destroyed that gave a list of persons in the city who could be relied on to desert the dictator and join the revolutionists as soon as fighting commenced. But this did not occur to her till the sound of heavy footsteps was heard on the staircase. She had only time to unlock a drawer, take out the paper and slip it under her dress at the neck when the door was thrown open and Manuel Coral with a man and a woman entered.

"I am sorry to disturb you, senorita," he said to Inez, "but the government has received news that you are in possession of plans of the revolutionists, and I have been sent here to get them."

"You mean," said Inez, whose indignation by this time had got the better of her grief, "that you have accused me."

"What matters it?" Pepita broke in, "since you are innocent of the charge? Let them search the room."

"I shall also be obliged to have you searched," said Coral. "I have brought a woman for the purpose."

Coral and the man he had brought with him began to search the room. Pepita asked permission to leave, and it was granted. Before doing so she embraced Inez and, slipping her thumb and forefinger in under the neck of her dress, drew the paper hidden there into the palm of her hand. Then she disengaged herself, but before doing so transferred the paper into her sleeve. Then, with a few words of encouragement for her friend, she took her departure.

As soon as Pepita had gone Coral ordered the woman to take Inez into another room and make a thorough search of her person, promising the former a handsome reward if she found what they were looking for. Inez left with a mingled glance of defiance and contempt for the man she had loved. She felt perfectly safe, Pepita having taken away the compromising document. Coral showed no feeling whatever at her treatment. In due time the two women returned, the searcher announcing that, though she had made a careful investigation of the senorita's clothing and her hair, not a scrap of information had been found. Then Coral, making a ceremonious bow to Inez, left her alone.

Inez was moved by two conflicting emotions. She had saved her brother and the cause he was engaged in from a serious setback, and, far more important than that, many a man who would have been implicated and lost his life had not Pepita carried away a list of their names that had been saved. On the other hand, she had received a bitter thrust in the treatment of her lover.

Her usefulness to the cause had ended and she determined to slip away from the city of Mexico and rejoin her brother. She was engaged in getting together the things she would take with her when the door opened, and Manuel Coral entered. Placing his finger to his lips, he looked about him to satisfy himself that no one else was present. Inez looked at him wondering what he would do next. Then he spoke hurriedly:

"I found it necessary to deceive the dictator, whose confidence I have. He had received indirect information that you were here in the interests of the revolutionists. I at once sent my brother to inform you that you were suspected and persuaded the dictator to permit me to make the search I knew you would be subjected to. I saw Pepita take a paper from the neck of your dress. You think I have betrayed you. I have saved you. Heaven knows what would have become of you had I not warned you or had another conducted the search."

Inez listened to these hurried words till the end, then, toppling, fell into her lover's arms.

When she came to herself Manuel Coral was bending over her anxiously.

"Go," he said, "while there is time. I have more to do here or I would go with you."

INDIAN HOSPITALITY.

A Brand of Their Own, Not "Stingy Like the White Man."

The early experiences of the white practitioner among reservation Indians make a chapter of encounters with aboriginal prejudice not wholly finished. Even his own life was not safe if the doctor ventured too near the borderland of prejudice, and if a death occurred at the beginning of his practice he was likely to be avoided for the rest of his sojourn. Many an Indian came for the first dose and was never seen or heard of afterward—whether death or distaste was the result of his visit the doctor might never know. Or an entire bottle of cough sirup would be consumed at once, on the theory that if a teaspoonful was good a bottleful would be better.

The constant hospitality practiced by Indians, and the custom of sharing the last crumb, is a phase of the food question difficult to be appreciated by whites. As long as an Indian has any subsistence, his neighbors and friends come a-visiting, to remain as long as the food holds out. To be inhospitable or "stingy like the white man" is an opprobrium which only the hardiest Indian can socially survive. This Indian virtue bars the way to an equalization of any distribution of food, and is the cause of many of those cases of "Indians starving."—Southern Workman.

DIED FOR HIS IDOL.

Heroism That Led to Napoleon's Title of "The Little Corporal."

It is related that Napoleon was once badly defeated at Coblentz by the Cossacks. After the battle he was surrounded by enemies and would have lost his life had he not been saved by the presence of mind of one of his soldiers, Corporal Spohn.

Realizing that Napoleon's only chance for life was in getting off the battle field unrecognized, the corporal begged the emperor to change hats and horses with him. The change was made ere the smoke of battle had cleared away, and Napoleon, with his corporal's hat and mounted on a poor steed, rode away unnoticed, the Cossacks crowding around the corporal. Taking him prisoner, they led him in triumph to the Russian general. There the mistake was soon discovered, and the corporal's brave act cost him his life.

According to the Coblentz legend, Napoleon, in remembrance of Spohn's self sacrifice, always after this preferred a corporal's uniform to any other and wore it so often that his men came to speak of him familiarly as "Le Petit Caporal."—From "The Rhine." Translated by G. C. T. Bartley.

Mastery of Music.

The mastery of music never just "came naturally" to any human being. The world has never known a more industrious worker than the illustrious Franz Schubert. Yet, if to any one in the world music "came naturally," it seemed to come so to him. When the school principal asked his harmony teacher how young Franz Schubert was progressing, the teacher said: "He is a wonder. Whenever I explain anything new to him, he always seems already to know it. He must have received his knowledge straight from heaven." Yet, in spite of such superb gifts, there was never a harder worker than he. And don't you think that we with our lesser gifts, should follow his example? If he with all his heaven sent genius could not succeed without strenuous daily labor, how can we hope to accomplish anything worth while without ceaseless, patient and conscientious toil?—Woman's World.

Your Castle of Thought.

Your Castle of Thought is the most sacred possession you have.

It is your real estate, your house of prayer.

Shall you harbor Doubt, a sickly tenant, to infect well meaning tenants? Doubt is about the worst tenant you can admit. Turn him out.

Doubting some one, any one, never gets you anything.

If the one you doubt is unworthy, then that is his problem, not yours. Give him this to read and let him come and take treatment.

Come and get your thought changed, and all things will be made new.—New York Sun.

By the Rules of the Game.

Little Mary Lou was eager to get back to her new doll and didn't know there was going to be any dessert. She slipped quietly from her chair, hoping she would not be observed.

Out in the hall she met the cook with the ice cream, and as quietly as she had left it she slipped back to her accustomed place at the table.

"Mary Lou," said her mother reprovingly, "I thought you had finished your dinner. It isn't polite to come back."

"But I didn't excuse myself, mother," the little girl said quickly.—New York Post.

Why They Worshiped Cats.

W. J. Showalter explains in the National Geographic Magazine why the ancient Egyptians worshiped cats. They noticed that where there were cats there was no bubonic plague. They did not know, of course, that it was the fleas on rats that spread the disease.

The Professor's Prophecy Failed.

While a student at Harvard university Phillips Brooks was walking in the yard one day with a professor, who asked him what he intended making of himself.

"I am thinking of the ministry," answered the youth.

"Then banish such thoughts," said the professor earnestly. "Your manner of speech would forever bar you from being successful in that calling."

Many years later, when Phillips Brooks was one of the world's great pulpit orators, the most expert stenographer in England took down one of his sermons and said:

"Any stenographer who thinks he has conquered fast talkers should try Phillips Brooks."

The Proper Order.

A successful man died not long ago. Somebody says his success was due to tact, a sense of humor and complete self confidence.

Fault has been found with the arrangement of this sequence.

The critic claims that self confidence should come first, with brains trailing.

There are six ways of arranging the trio.

OMENS IN BASEBALL.

A Manager's Method of Turning a Superstition to Account.

Writing on baseball matters in the New York Tribune, John J. McGraw has this to say about the superstitions of the players:

"I recognize the superstitions of ball players. For example, back in 1904, when Bowerman was with the team, he came to me one day and said:

"'As I came in today I saw a team of white horses driving past the Polo grounds. That's a good sign. Watch me kill the ball this afternoon.'

"He did. The belief in his superstition had given him confidence. Bowerman spread the tidings of the white horses around the clubhouse. The next day somebody else saw the white horses, so the day after. By the end of the week the entire team was hitting like a house on fire. They all believed in the superstition, and it gave them confidence. One day my shortstop, Dahlen, remarked:

"'Funny those white horses always happen to drive past the ball park just when we are coming into the clubhouse. It's certainly lucky.'

"I heard him and couldn't keep back a smile. On the day Bowerman told me he had seen the horses I made up my mind that everybody else would see them as long as it helped their batting. So I engaged a man to drive past the Polo grounds every day. That is a fact, and it shows the lengths to which a manager will go to cater to ball players' superstitions."

DALTON'S EXPERIMENT.

Showing What a Genius Can Do With Crude Apparatus.

The great English chemist Dalton was a schoolteacher. He worked without a laboratory and with crude apparatus, mostly made by himself from simple materials. Here is an example described in his own words:

"Took an ale glass of a conical figure, two and a half inches in diameter and three inches deep; filled it with water that had been standing in the room and consequently of the temperature of the air nearly; put the bulb of the thermometer to the bottom of the glass, the scale being out of the water. Then, having marked the temperature, I put the redhot tip of the poker half an inch deep in the water, holding it there steadily for half a minute, and as soon as it was withdrawn I dipped the bulb of a sensible thermometer into the water, when it rose in a few seconds to 180 degrees."

He then determined the temperature of the water at the bottom after five minutes, after twenty minutes and after an hour and found that it rose gradually from 47 to 52 degrees. This simple experiment proved that water has the power to conduct heat, which had been denied by no less an authority than Rumford.—Youth's Companion.

The Conscientious Chinese Child.

One of our missionaries, writing of a little girl in the school under her care, says: "Last night Wah Noo told me she wanted to be 'a whole Christian,' as she called it. So we had a long talk and tried to think of all the wrong we had done that day and confess it to each other. She counted these wrongs on her fingers: 'I did not brush my teeth as you told me to do; I did not take off the lower sheet on the bed when I made it up, and I know I ought to always; I got angry with one of the girls at school; I did not use my soap when I took my bath; I did not try to do my example in multiplication; all the other girls did theirs wrong, so I thought I would too.'"—Cor. Christian Herald.

Poetry and Punctuation.

In his poem "Narcissus" Robert Bridges, the English poet laureate, has banished the comma entirely, so that a procession of adjectives may be taken, at the reader's option, as separate qualities or as qualifying each other. Thus one may call his hero "almighty wondrous" or regard him as being both. Mr. Bridges' principles of punctuation are not obvious. He loves the exclamation mark, using it five times in the twenty-eight lines of the poem, and sprinkles dashes about with prodigality. He adopts the colon and does not slight the interrogation mark, while using now and then a full stop.—Chicago News.

A Lucky Escape.

"I owe my success in life to politics."

"I was not aware that you were a politician."

"I'm not, but I thought I was once and got myself nominated for an office that, if I had been elected, would have paid me about $1,500 a year. I was so badly beaten that I dropped politics forever and took up the business that has brought me a fortune. It makes me shudder when I remember that if I had been elected I might now be afraid of doing something that would deprive me of the lodging house vote."—Chicago Herald.

ARE YOU A MATHEMATICIAN?

Then Solve This Problem and Win a Prize of $25,000.

The largest single prize offered for a scientific discovery is still going begging. The prize has been open to competition for many years. At first sight the problem for a solution of which the prize is offered looks no more difficult than those with which high school students are familiar, but many of the greatest mathematicians in the world have tried to solve the problem and given it up in despair.

It is known as Fermat's problem. Nearly 800 years ago Fermat, one of the greatest mathematicians who ever lived, stated that the equation $x^n+y^n=z^n$ could not be satisfied by whole numbers when n is an odd prime number different from unity. The problem may be stated in another way—viz, that $x^n+y^n=z^n$ cannot be satisfied when n is any integer greater than 2. The one follows as a logical conclusion from the other.

The Academy of Sciences of Goettingen, Germany, offers a prize of 100,000 marks (about $25,000) for proof of this assertion. This is the prize that is going begging.

Dr. Joseph Bowden, professor of mathematics, Adelphi college, Brooklyn, asked by the Scientific American to state the precise conditions for winning the prize, writes that the Academy of Sciences will not consider any manuscripts sent in, but only proposed solutions printed and offered for sale as monographs, in books on mathematics or in mathematical periodicals. The award will not be made until two years after the publication of the memoir in order that mathematicians may have ample opportunity to test and criticise the solution.

The object of these restrictions is to save the academy from being flooded with undigested manuscripts. It will only consider solutions that have stood the test of some competent editor or publisher in the first place.

FRANCE IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Its Influence in the Melting Pot of the Latin Races.

South America is the melting pot of the Latin races, and the French influence now seems to predominate over that of Spain. Italy is well represented, especially in strong Argentina. Brazil seems to be the most polyglot of them all, for here the native Portuguese is mingled not only with the Spanish and French and English, but a great deal of German. In the south of Brazil 90 per cent of the people speak German, and Portuguese is not always enforced as the language even of the public schools.

The large German colonies here do not affiliate with these people as they do with the Anglo-Saxon brothers of the north. They live to themselves, they retain their own language and customs. In Chile, where there are many English, too, the Germans direct the education of the country. Buenos Aires is close to this Germanic group in southern Brazil and feels its influence, though Argentina seems the most unified and progressive of the republics in point of literary expression and culture.

French influence also is felt in Brazil. Rio de Janeiro itself was founded as a refuge for French Huguenots, though they were afterward driven back. In Paris today one hears that a youth is to emigrate to America, but probably it is to Rio that he is going. There are many French immigrants, and French is required in most of the schools and is next to the native tongue in importance in northern Brazil. Formerly in Brazil Spanish or German always came next to French, but it is said that some of the states now require English as the third language and that Brazilians are proud of their English.—Christian Science Monitor.

Had Told the Truth.

"Is the master of the house in?" inquired the smooth tongued book agent of the little boy who answered his ring. "Nope," said the boy. "Little boys should not tell falsehoods," said the book agent. "Isn't that your father reading the newspaper there by the window?" "Yep," was the answer; "that's pa, all right, but ma is out."

FACIAL FOLIAGE.

Looking For Mother's Spectacles In Father's Whiskers.

In the American Magazine James Montgomery Flagg writes an amusing piece entitled "Whiskerculture." Following is an extract:

"It's a heartrending sight in any case, this facial landscape gardening, from the time that they innocently say at breakfast, 'You forgot to shave this morning, dear!' (it has taken three days for even the rough sketch you show them!) to the dreadful harvest of your noxious inspiration.

"Picture the nervous strain on the wife and babes as they witness the gradual budding (blossoming and fruition of the horror. How they sadly watch the head of the house slowly disappearing in a cloud of brambles.

"See those outstretched dimpled arms and hear those sobbing voices. 'Come back to us, papa!'

"Isn't your pride touched on the raw when your wife lifts up the door mat in the vestibule and kisses it good night on account of its comparative silkiness? Stop, consider, you who through some inherited mental weakness do not know the difference between right and whiskers—hesitate! Why add to the strain of family life? Even if you have provided your wife with a vacuum cleaner why multiply the cares of a busy housekeeper?

"Ask yourself if it will add in any way to the pleasure of any one in the family. When your mother has mislaid her steel rimmed spectacles does it not make one more place that has to be ransacked?

"Men who embark on a career of whiskerculture are obviously thoughtless. What man would cultivate wistaria chinensis on his chin if he visualized himself at some future breakfast having to loop up those vines with portiere cords in order to slide a poached egg in without mutilating it?"

OBJECTS ON THE MOON.

The Size They Must Be to Show In Our Different Telescopes.

The Abbe Moreux, director of the astronomical observatory of Bourges, France, answers in Cosmos the question, "What is the smallest object visible on the moon?"

First, it is necessary to know what is the smallest angular magnitude that the naked eye can perceive. Experiment, says the abbe, proves this to be thirty seconds. In other words, an object that subtends an arc of thirty seconds is first visible to the naked eye. Therefore an object having an angular diameter of one second can be seen when it is magnified thirty times. An arc of one second represents about 6,000 square feet at the center of the lunar disc. Hence, a telescope that magnifies thirty times will make visible a spot 6,000 feet in diameter on the surface of the moon.

A more powerful telescope will reveal smaller objects. One with four inches aperture and a power of 300 will show objects of 600 feet diameter. One with a power of 2,000 diameters will reveal details measuring about ninety feet.

This, however, is theory. It takes a trained and practiced eye to see fine details through a telescope. The agitation of the earth's atmosphere by winds and currents interferes terribly with the use of very high powers in telescopes. An enlargement of 400 diameters almost exceeds the practical limit. It can be used only on perfectly clear, still nights when the moon is high above the horizon. This will reveal objects 450 feet in diameter, but will not show any form or detail.

Levels of Atlantic and Pacific.

At certain stages of the tide the levels of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans at the isthmus of Panama differ materially. At Colon the difference between high and low water is not much more than twenty-three inches, while at Panama it is generally thirteen feet and at times as much as nineteen feet. The current that would be produced by this condition of things in a sea level canal would seriously interfere with navigation, but under the present arrangement of a locked canal the difficulty is obviated. The Suez canal presented no such difficulty, the difference in tide level at Port Said and Suez being of a trifling nature.—New York American.

An Old Acquaintance.

A resourceful girl, having danced a pink party frock to ribbons, took what was left of it and made a wonderful lamp shade. The next evening she was entertaining a caller in the soft light and she said to him quite casually: "How do you like my new lamp shade?"

William regarded it for a moment critically, then he said: "The last time I saw that shade I danced with it."—New York Post.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all the other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses of from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Energy in the Sun.

At the distance of the earth from it (93,000,000 miles), the heat energy yearly expended by the sun is as great in amount as would be produced by the burning of sixty-six globes of the best anthracite coal, each as heavy as the earth, or 5,346 such globes, each equal in weight to the moon. But the greater part of this energy is, as far as we can see, expended upon empty space because, except where a planetary body is interposed in the path of the rays, there is nothing for them to act upon. Only about two-thousand-millionth of the sun's radiant energy is intercepted by the earth and only about one two-hundred-and-twenty-five-millionth by all the planets together. This makes the sun look like a gigantic spendthrift, but if he did not radiate in every direction he would not be seen from distant space; he would not be a star among the stars, and who can say that what he expends to make himself known and to maintain his rank in the universe, is not as well spent as the gratuities that he flings to his planets.—Garrett P. Serviss in Spokane Review.

How to Win.

This is an age of specialization, my boy, and the only men who succeed in a big way are those who pick out some particular line of work and live with it until they get to know more about it than most other fellows. Concentration, consistent and persistent effort in one direction is the surest road to success. You'll never win in a big way—except accidentally—if you scatter your energies. The best steam engine in the world would race itself to ruin without its governor. Keep your mind on your job, specialize in your particular business and try to know as much about it as the man who created it, and, barring misfortune, you'll make more out of that knowledge than you will out of any chance success outside of your business.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Personal Property.

A Cleveland attorney took the Mediterranean trip a month ago. It was his first time across the water, and he stated on his return that he would have had a perfectly glorious time but for the silly questions asked him by customs officials.

It was on the pier at New York that his woes came to a climax. "Open your trunk, please," commanded the custom house officer. "Have you anything in there but personal property?" he continued.

"What do you mean by personal property?" countered the lawyer.

"For heaven's sake! Don't you know what personal property is?" The officer looked up in amazement.

"I thought I did," answered the attorney, "and I can assure you that there is no real estate in my trunk."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Pepys' Library.

Pepys' library since 1724 has been in the possession of Magdalene college, Cambridge. Pepys directed in his will that his collection of books and manuscripts should be transferred on the death of his nephew, John Jackson, to either Trinity college or Magdalene college, Cambridge, and required that the college which received the books should submit to an annual visitation from the other, the purpose of which should be to ascertain whether the trust was being worthily fulfilled. "Could I be sure," Pepys wrote, "of a constant succession of heirs from my said nephew qualified like himself for the use of such a library, I should not entertain a thought of its ever being alienated from them."

Potato Juice Cure.

Potato juice as a remedy for sprains, lumbago, gout, rheumatism and bruises is recommended by Dr. Heaton C. Howard of London in an article in the London Lancet. He cites numerous cases in his own practice in which the pain has been relieved quickly, sometimes by the first application, and the fluid that has exuded into the joint or the membranes has been absorbed within a few days.

Potato juice is used as an ointment, a liniment or a plaster. The raw potatoes are squeezed in a hydraulic press. The starch and nitrogenous matter are removed and the juice boiled down until it is made five times as strong as when fresh. Glycerin is added to preserve it.

Sargent and His Pictures.

When Sargent has finished a picture he is heartily glad to see the last of it. The story goes that a royal visitor to his studio said, after looking over the pictures, "I wonder you can bear to part with them." "Sir," answered Sargent, "having finished a picture, I am like a hen which has laid an egg. 'Come and take it away, come and take it away!' I exclaim. Its removal enables me to start another."—Sheffield (England) Telegraph.

To Shell Pecans.

The meats of pecan nuts may easily be removed if they are first placed in a pan and boiling water poured over them, says the Western Christian Advocate. Allow them to remain in the water for 20 or 30 minutes. When the nuts are cracked the meats come out without trouble and are usually whole.

TUFTS LIBRARY WEYMOUTH.

WEYMOUTH, MASS., FRIDAY, AUG. 14, 1914. VOL. XLVIII. NO. 22. PRICE FIVE CENTS

STATISTICS AND TAX RATE.

Something Besides Foreign War to Talk About.

The assessors have so far completed their work as to fix the tax rate for 1914 and kindly give us the following:—

Town tax	188,845 82
State tax	20,475.00
County tax	7,841 87
Metropolitan Park	2,723.59
Charles River Basin	844 28
Highway	458.12
Valuation	12,102,000.00

Polls, 3,862; tax rate, $18.25 per $1,000.

By this it will be seen that the tax rate is 75 cents per $1,000 more than last year which may be accounted for on account of the largely increased state, county and Metropolis taxes, in all of which there has been a most liberal expenditure of money and we may well ask what does Weymouth benefit by most of them, especially when we speak of the Metropolitan park system, while we are in it for our share of the expenditures, we have not seen any Metropolitan swan lakes and play grounds established in Weymouth.

The valuation figures of the assessors are of interest to the public. Since the revision which began three years ago, we have gained something over $3,000,000.00 and now find that the tax rate is 15 cents per $1,000 less than it was in 1911.

The job of an assessor is not an enviable one but it looks as though Weymouth's tax rate will compare favorably with other towns and what we need most of all is a curtailment of state and Metropolitan expenditures.

Fairbanks Family Reunion.

Members of the Fairbanks family in America, and their friends, will meet in reunion on the 13th annual home-coming of the Fairbanks family at the old homestead, Dedham, Mass., August 20th. It will be an all-day gathering. Luncheon can be obtained on the grounds.

The homestead is the original dwelling built in 1636, with Dutch brick fireplaues, solid oak timbers and much white pine paneling, all in splendid preservation. It is the oldest frame dwelling in New England and has never been out of the possession of, or not occupied by, a Fairbanks.

All persons having a Fairbanks ancestor, by birth or marriage, are eligible for membership in the association. All persons interested are invited to attend this reunion.

Henry Irving Fairbanks of Dedham, is president of the association, and Mrs. Emmie Louise Peabody of Annisquam, secretary.

ENDS IN DISPUTE.

Slow Game at Braintree Last Saturday Between C. M. A. and Braintree A. A. One Constant Wrangle.

On the Hollis school field at Braintree last Saturday afternoon, the Braintree A. A. and Clapp Memorial nine of East Weymouth played their second contest of the year, the game ending in the ninth inning with a dispute over the umpire's ruling on a play early in the game.

In the fifth inning, with Rein, Riley and DeYoung on the bases and one out, Cahill hit an infield fly. However, in spite of the declaration by the umpire that the ball hit was an infield fly, the runners on the bases started for the next base. Moralles failed to catch the infield fly, but on recovering the ball, threw to second base, where Umpire Delorey declared an out, according to his version of the rules. He further stated, the Clapp nine claims, that the run did not count. Braintree claims the umpire told them it did count.

Through the mix-up, the point was not settled at this time, and when the C. M. A. boys tied up the score in the ninth, or supposed they had, the argument began anew, Braintree claiming a 4 to 3 score and Clapp a tie at 3 each. After much arguing the players and spectators both left the field without the point settled.

For Braintree Cook's pitching during the first part of the game was a feature, while Deane played well for the C. M. A. nine. The summary:—

C. M. A.—Deane 1b, A. Humphrey 3b, Fraher c, Drinkwater cf, Moralles 2b, Condrick p, Gorman ss, Vender lf, Pray lf and Bumpus rf.

B. A. A.—Horgan ss, Hubbard cf, Rein c, Riley 3b, DeYoung 2b, Cahill lf, Mahar rf, Leary 1b and Cook p.

Double play—Condrick to Dean. Triple play—Cook to Leary to DeYoung. Wild pitches—Cook, Condrick. Passed ball—Rein. Time—2 hours, 10 minutes. Umpire—Delorey.

James W. Tufts Aid Society Outing.

At the New Downer's Landing last Saturday the annual outing of the James W. Tufts Mutual Aid society of Boston was held with a large number present.

The committee in charge consisted of Joseph Henger, Edward Sullivan, William Buckington, Bradford Tedford, Walter Traquir, James Hartnell, Miss Olive Foye, Emil Holmstead, W. E. Pray and Robert Amundsen.

Orchestral selections were given by an orchestra led by James O'Brien and dancing was enjoyed. A fine program of sports of all kinds was run off and the ball game between the American Soda Fountain nine of Boston and the Chippewa team resulted in a win for the latter 4—3.

Mrs. Elizabeth Denbroeder, Dead.

After an illness of but a few days Mrs. Elizabeth, widow of the late Adrian Denbroeder, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cisco Hart, North Bridgewater, yesterday afternoon in the 87th year of her age.

Funeral services will be held at the Congregational church, East Weymouth, Sunday at 2 p. m. Members of W. R. C. Corps 102 please take notice.

ANOTHER VETERAN AT REST.

James D. Dunbar Passed Away Last Monday at His Home in East Weymouth.

James D. Dunbar, aged 78 years and a veteran of the Civil War, passed away last Monday at his home, 777 Broad street, East Weymouth, after a long illness.

Mr. Dunbar served three years in Co. H., 12th Massachusetts Infantry. For eleven months he was a prisoner at Belle Isle.

He was born in Hingham, but since the age of 16 has resided in this town. He was a member of Post 58, G. A. R. He leaves a son, Charles E. Dunbar of East Weymouth, with whom he has made his home, and a daughter, Mrs. Harry Beedam of Springfield.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon in the chapel of the East Weymouth Congregational church. Rev. Edward T. Ford conducted the services. Buriel was at North Weymouth cemetery where a volley was fired over the grave by the color guard of Post 58, G. A. R., and taps were sounded. The bearers were Christopher Tower, Frank Derby, James Pease and George Hunt.

Jackson Square.

There are public squares innumerable in Weymouth, all with a history more or less interesting and varied, but none more so than Jackson Square in East Weymouth, which derived its name not from a prominent citizen, but from Gen. Jackson, the hero of early Indian wars and more particularly his achievement in the famous battle at New Orleans in the so-called war of 1812.

Jackson was the seventh president of the United States and had a strong adherent in Lovell Bicknell for many years the leading Democrat of Weymouth and to him we are indebted for the name of the square which now adorns the plot of ground in front of the old Lovell Bicknell homestead.

For many years the square was without ornamentation but in 1857 or 58, Lovell Bicknell and the senior Samuel Healy planted the tree which stands in the center of the square.

Since that time there have been spasmotic periods of improvement and again periods of neglect and decay.

Thirty-four years ago there was a marked uplift, nearly two hundred dollars were raised, the square beautified and adorned with a magnificent urn, again for the Old Home week of two years ago, like magic it and its environments were the admiration of the entire town and visiting public.

And now once more it comes to the front as a beauty spot with its renovated band stand, ornamented green, curb stone and concrete protection.

Not the least of the improvements made are several setters donated by the following citizens:—Henry E. Hanley 2, Robert S. Hoffman, W. A. Wheaton, S. B. Totman, E. Loud, J. McCarthy, Weymouth Light & Power Co. and Frank H. Holmes one each. Two of which settees have been marked "for women only" but there are some men who either can not read or are lost to the sense of gallantry and with them it is "first come first served."

There is another still greater and undoubtedly a lasting improvement yet to come, which for all time will stand as a monument to the Weymouth Board of Trade and King's Daughters of Weymouth, as the drinking fountain for both man and beast, donated by them is completed and will be installed during this month.

3,000 AT GARDEN PARTY

Mayor Curley of Boston, Speaker at Festivities of St. Jerome Church Parishioners last Saturday.

One of the largest attended and most enjoyed summer events in town every year is the annual lawn party of the St. Jerome church parishioners, which attracts the amusement loving public from miles around. The affair this year was held last Saturday afternoon and evening on the church grounds at North Weymouth and nearly three thousand people attended during the afternoon and evening.

The proceeds are for the building fund of the church, the former edifice having burned some few years ago, and a new church building is now in the process of erection at the corner of Neck and Bridge streets.

In spite of indications of showers at noon last Saturday the committees in charge went ahead with all arrangements and when the first group of children, who were admitted free in the afternoon, put in their appearance about one forty-five, old King Sol appeared also and helped to make the day one long to be remembered

Situated about the grounds were booths, tables and stands of all descriptions, presided over by the following parishioners of St. Jerome's church in North Weymouth and of the Immaculate Conception church in East Weymouth: fish pond: Mrs. Edward Quinn, Mrs. Lucy Tangway, Mrs. Frank Kamerford, Mrs. George Show, Miss Nora Joyce, Miss Katherine Fogarty.

Refreshments: Miss Margaret Coleman, Lester Richards, Isaac McIsaac, Mrs. John Delorey, Miss Agnes Crehan, Miss Isabel Murphy, Miss Agnes Egan, Miss Mary Monahan, Miss Agnes Monahan, Mrs. John J. Pitts, Mrs. Almira Tanguay, Mrs. Margaret McCarthy.

Snip Table: Mrs. Katherine Bowles Howley, Miss May L. Sheehy.

Country Store: William Reed, Miss Addie Delory, Miss Alice Hurley, Joseph Buckley.

Temperance Beverages: C. M. Daley, Henry Dicter, Charles Killian.

Ice Cream Booth: Miss Mary Kearns, Miss Bessie Roberts, Miss Nellie Crane, Miss Sarah McCue, Miss Alice Cullen, Miss M. E. Kelley, Miss Margaret Yourell, Miss Margaret Cook, Miss Agnes Mulligan, Miss Rose Shields.

Canday Table: Miss Mary O'Rourke, Miss Mary Moran, Miss Susie O'Rourke, Miss Annie Kearns, Miss Lillian McCue, Miss Mary Heffernan.

Fancy Table: Mrs. Rose Landry, Miss Agnes Pitts, Mrs. H. J. Donahue, Mrs. J. E. Lennon, Mrs. Olive H. Bean, Miss Helen Reidy, Miss Nellie Cummin.

Wheel of Fortune: Charles A. Smith, B. J. Connell, James Knox, Cornelius Lynch, Frank McCarthy, C. B. Mitchell, Thomas Sculley.

Cane Table: John Cullivan, Joseph McCarthy, Thomas DeCoste, John Keohan.

Cigar Wheel: Martin Cody, Rupert Carwen, T. F. McCue Jr., William Connell.

Hoop-la Table: N. Landry, Francis Landry, John Tangway, John Upton.

All the tables and booths did a rushing business all the afternoon and in the evening.

In the afternoon, the program was especially for the younger people. There was a parade of a hundred children in various costumes. Led by the Mission church band of Roxbury, this line of young folks marched from the center of the village to the grounds, making a most pleasing sight indeed. Each marcher was the recipient of a fine gift and special prizes for the handsomest costumes were awarded to Phillip Cope, John A. Tobin, Alice McIsaac and Mary Tobin.

Following the parade a program of children's sports were held in charge of J. P. Scully, Thomas Coleman, Charles Cullivan, Bart Connell and Bernard Mitchell. The results were as follows:

50-yd. dash for girls: Alice Dolan.

Three-legged race for girls: Viola Sherman and Bertha Wolfe.

100-yd. dash for boys: Francis Lonergan.

Running race for children under six: James Caldwell, Mary Husband, second.

Three-legged race for boys: Robert Tufts and Francis Grady.

Potato race for boys: Robert Creighton.

In the baseball game, the Bigelows of Quincy defeated the Riversides of North Weymouth 21 to 9.

In the evening the grounds were beautifully decorated with colored lights and lanterns. Dancing was enjoyed and their was speechmaking by Mayor Curley of Boston, Ex-Congressman Joseph E. O'Connell and Rev. James W. Allison, pastor of the Immaculate Conception church in East Weymouth. Mayor Curley spoke on "The Influence of the Church on the Community."

At a late hour the merry-makers departed for their various homes and the annual picnic is now a matter of history. In closing it is safe to say that the event was a record breaker for success and all around good time.

Postal Savings.

The Boston post office ranked third in the United States in point of postal savings deposits at the end of the fiscal year June 30, and is one of the four offices that has passed the million dollar mark. New York leads with $4,400,000 on deposit, then comes Chicago with $2,300,000, Brooklyn, $1,500,000 and Boston $1,100,000. Boston showed a gain of deposits during the year of 31 percent and there was an increase of 12 per cent in the number of depositors, which on June 30 aggregated 12,441. The average account of the Boston postal savings depositor is growing rapidly. In 1912 it was $62, in 1913 $78, in 1914 $91.

The postal savings service is open at the main office each week day from 8 a. m. to 6.30 p. m. at all of the stations and branch offices from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

TOWN BUSINESS

Selectmen and other Departments Discuss Work and Ways and Means.

Owing to the absence of the chairman of the Board of Selectmen, who is on his vacation, some of the business of the board was put over on Monday. The following however, is a part of the days' doings.

The North Weymouth Associates were granted a permit to hold outings at Hunts' hill for the remainder of August and during September.

Henry C. Pratt in behalf of several Oddfellow organizations, petitioned for a permit to have a celebration on Lovells' field, Saturday, the 15th, and it was granted.

The matter of Precinct officers for the coming elections was discussed but as there must necessarily be several changes, further time was taken to make up the list.

A hearing was given Alden, Walker & Wilde on petition to keep aud store gasoline supplies and wood alcohol in an outbuilding near their factory and the same was granted.

A hearing was given the Weymouth Leather Art Co. on petition to keep and use celluloid solutions, wood alcohol and gasoline. There being no remonstrant, the petition was granted but to be valid it needed the approval of the chief of the fire department and by him it was turned down. There is however a "Higher Court" and that is the district police and his decision will be watched with interest. The Leather Art Industry is a large one in the country and while there is some hazard in it, the location of this particular factory is about as far removed from surrounding danger as is possible.

In order to obtain a corporation charter in this Commonwealth, it is now necessary for the corporators to obtain the endorsement of the selectmen of a town as to certain features of personal character and the following persons ask endorsement in order to be incorporated as "The King Cove Boat Club":—John W. S. Wolfe, Lester H. Culley, Cyrus C. Howland, George H. Miller, Joseph H. McEnroe, Frank H. Miller, Irving W. Morgan, Charles H. Austin, Edward W. Parker and Edward G. Bascom.

Expert Opinion Fallible.

We shall all read the speculations of experts about the European situation with absorbed interest, but experience suggests that we should not rely upon it altogether. The relative military and naval strength of the powers is a matter of interest, and under the rule of probabilities we should greatly respect expert conclusions based on the rame- But we are reminded that some gloomy predictions at the outset of the Spanish-American war proved to be unwarranted. The Russo-Japanese forecasts were likewise unreliable. The personal equation is always variable and is such a thing as luck, or perhaps a more pious name for it could be found. We have learned that even such simple contests as boat races, horse races, baseball games and prize fights do not always follow the form charts in results. Once in a rare while a 50 to 1 horse noses out in a race in which the favorite is an "also ran." But we are always interested in the "dope" furnished by the experts.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

DON'TS FOR THIN WOMEN.

Don't walk too much. A moderate amount of exercise will be beneficial, but very long walks are reducing and apt to prove exhausting.

Don't wear black. It has a tendency to make every one look slender. Wear light clothes if they suit you at all.

Don't stay up late at night. Get at least nine hours' sleep, as this will help to fatten you.

Don't forget that a rounded figure, even though slender, is considered a beauty and takes from the age of its possessor.

Don't worry, as nothing so quickly wastes tissues and muscles and reduces one to skeleton-like proportions and a haggard countenance.

Don't depend upon quack remedies. Rely upon rest, suitable food of a starchy nature, massage and plenty of sleep to make you plump.

THE NARROW UNDERSKIRT.

Despite Predictions, It Continues to Be Favored by Smart Women.

It was prophesied that the underskirt would soon drop from its secondary place, the flaring tunic be lengthened and women go back to one skirt instead of wearing two, as they do now. There is little sign of this at the present moment, for the wide tunic, as contrasted with the narrow skirt beneath, seems to delight women.

This narrow underskirt must be slashed in the middle of the back if one would walk with comfort, and it has to be short if one would walk at all. Both of these features are added, or rather incorporated on the present garment. As to the exact spot between the hips and the ankles where the flare should come, each woman judges of that for herself. Her own length of line must determine it.

Not only have tunics got this width at the hem, but so have all the modish coats. They hang away from the figure as soon as they pass the waist line, and many do not wait for that spot to bulge into space.

LITTLE MAID'S PARIS FROCK.

This little girl wears a very modern Paris frock of cinnamon colored mohair and worsted mixture, showing the long waist, low placed belt and plaited tunic above a very narrow skirt, all distinguishing features of the adult costume.

Potato Stained Hands.

Housewives can save their hands from staining if they will let their potatoes soak in cold water with a little soda in it for a few moments before scraping the vegetables.

SEEN IN GARDENS.

Garden vases are particularly beautiful and are built along the most classic lines. Many are reproductions of vases found in the old Roman gardens. Others are copied from the famous vases in the gardens at Versailles.

Garden benches are useful as well as ornamental. One beautiful specimen is an exact reproduction of one that was found in the ruins of Pompeii. These benches when placed at the end of an avenue of trees are beautiful.

BEING A DICTATOR.

A Case of Quick Thought and Speedy Action in Latin America.

Half a dozen men in the lobby of a New York hotel were discussing the frequency of revolutions and assassinations in Mexico and other Latin-American countries. A short, dumpy little Englishman, who had a cold, gray eye, told this:

In a country which we will call Dumala there was a president whom we will call Harera. He had made it the custom, by official proclamation, for the guard of honor, which consisted of sons of prominent families of his country, to present arms whenever he emerged from the presidential palace. While the men and officers presented arms, the standard bearer raised the great flag and exclaimed:

"Viva Harera!"

People who wanted Harera put out of business bribed the standard bearer and six members of the guard of honor to assassinate him. The plan was that, when he came out of the palace the standard bearer was to hold up the flag, shout "Viva Dumala!" and throw the heavy banner over the president. While he was knocked down and blinded by the folds of the flag, the six traitors were to shoot at him.

At the appointed time Harera came out. The standard bearer, holding his flag aloft, shouted "Viva Dumala!" and hurled the banner over the president, the folds of it enveloping him and throwing him.

The traitors, seeing him helpless on the ground, fired at his head under the banner. That was where the plot went wrong.

As Harera went down under the weight of the falling flag, he had the presence of mind to lie flat on his back and hold one of his arms straight up from him, thus supporting the flag and giving the impression that his fist was his head. The only wound he received was one bullet through his hand.

The traitors, having figured that six of them shooting at him would be sure to kill him, did not have extra cartridges. When he stood up and threw off the flag their companions arrested them.

"You must have your hand dressed," suggested one of the officers, seeing the blood flowing from the president's wound.

"I'll do that," said Harera, "as soon as these traitors have been executed."

He had them lined up in front of the palace and gave the word that resulted in their death from a volley by their companions. After that he went into the palace and had his wound dressed, all of which indicates that the gentle art of being president in Latin America calls for quick thought and speedy action.—Popular Magazine.

Tennis as a Test.

Tennis is a sure revealer of character. Three sets with a man suffice to give one a working knowledge of his moral equipment; six, of his chief mental traits, and a dozen, of that most important and usually veiled part of him, his subconscious personality. Young people of opposite sexes are sometimes counseled to take a long railway journey together before deciding on a matrimonial merger. But I would respectfully advise them rather to play "singles" with each other before venturing upon a continuous game of doubles.—Robert H. Schauffler in Atlantic.

Gooseberries as a Tonic.

A supposed authority strongly recommends gooseberries, cooked, of course, as a tonic better than the finer berries generally in the market. The gooseberry has an acid not to be found in other small berries, or perhaps it is a salt. Anyhow, they are good and health giving. There we go following a custom of England, where the gooseberry has been the main feature of tarts, famed in song and story.—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

Eels as Food.

The eel's food value is great and in some countries it is staple. The English consume millions, but the Scotch would quite as soon eat snakes. So in the ancient times, while the Romans consumed large quantities, the Egyptians would not touch them. A great many of our people have this same aversion to the eel, though a great many others are fond of it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

One Way.

"Mr. Interlocutor, can you tell me how one may make ice water without ice?"

"No, Mr. Bones, I cannot. Will you tell us how?"

"Peel an onion, and that will make your eyes water."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Brazil's Coffee.

A Portuguese, Joao Alberto Castello Branco, is said to have planted the first coffee tree in Rio de Janeiro in 1760, and from this small beginning has developed the industry which has made Brazil the greatest coffee producer of the world.

What Did He Mean?

Gibbs—So you send your wife abroad for three months every year. Its great to have money. Dibbs—Yes, money is certainly a great blessing.—Stamford Chaparral.

Safety First.

The reason we wouldn't hire a man who never makes mistakes is because he would soon have our job.—Galveston News.

There's no slipping up hill again and no standing still when you've begun to slip down.—George Eliot.

FIREFLIES IN JAPAN.

Catching Them For Decorative Purposes is a Regular Trade.

In Japan there is followed the pretty custom of employing in garden parties and in various other social functions the native fireflies for purposes of decorative illumination. In some cases these tiny creatures are disposed about in cages; sometimes they are released in swarms in the presence of guests.

To meet the demand for fireflies thus used it follows that there must be some systematic method of effecting their capture in sufficient quantities. There are a number of concerns in the Japanese cities that employ men to catch the fireflies. These hunters proceed about their task in this way:

The start is made at sunset, and the hunter takes with him a long bamboo pole and a bag of mosquito netting. When a suitable growth of willows near water is reached the hunter makes ready his net and strikes the branches, filled with the insects, with his pole. This jars them to the ground, where they may easily be gathered if one proceed about the job quickly before they have had time to recover and fly away.

The skilled hunter, sparing no time to put them at once into his bag, uses both hands to pick them up, and he tosses them lightly into his apron, where he holds them unharmed until it can contain no more. Then he transfers them to his bag.

This work proceeds until about 2 o'clock in the morning, at which hour the insects are beginning to leave the trees for the dewy soil. Then the hunter changes his tactics. He brushes the surface of the ground with a light broom to startle the insects into flight, when they are taken as before. It is said that an expert may capture as many as 3,000 in a single night.—Washington Star.

To Start a Balky Horse.

In Farm and Fireside John H. Cowan tells as follows one way to start a balky horse:

"If you are driving a team and one horse balks take up the reins and get on the back of the balky horse. Press the heels gently into the flanks, speak a few encouraging words and then say, 'Get up,' as if going to ride. I have seen this tried many times and have never seen it fail."

The Cheerful Man.

"Is this train on time?" asked the restless passenger.

"No," replied the conductor. "We're two hours late."

"That's good. I'd rather be here than in the town I'm going to."—Washington Star.

The Patriot's Feed.

"I think I will take a little fish, waiter."

"Yes, sir. Bluefish or whitefish, sir?"

"Bring me a little of each and also a portion of red snapper. I'm nothing if not patriotic."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Proper Place.

"Pa, shall I put this book on medieval tortures on the library table?"

"No, son; you had better put it on the rack."—Baltimore American.

Very, Very Different.

"So Jack is engaged, is he? And is Fanny the bride to be?"

"No; she's the tried to be."—Boston Transcript.

Better Toll Rates

New telephone toll regulations provide that unless you talk to the person asked for there will be NO CHARGE FOR THE TOLL CALL.

Formerly a reduced rate was charged when the number called was reached even though the person asked for was absent or not ready to talk.

Why not make a call now to some one who would like to hear from you to-day? No talk—no charge.

Wouldn't it be worth the price?

If you don't know the rate, ask the Toll Operator. No charge for a call for rates. If you want the Toll Operator to report to you the actual cost of a completed call, please notify her when you give the order for the call.

A toll call is more satisfactory than a letter or a telegram, and in some instances is more economical, because you get the message and the answer for one price.

WOMAN IN HISTORY.

She Appears to Have Got Herself on a Good Many Pages.

Some advocates of equal suffrage and feminine progress seem to think that woman has not been given her proper place and due credit in history.

And yet, don't you know, we had not observed the historic discrimination against woman! On the contrary, the place of woman in history has looked pretty good to us.

What about Joan of Arc? And Charlotte Corday? And Rebecca the Jewess? Anything namby pamby in them? Who said Martha Washington and Florence Nightingale? Then there are—don't let everybody speak at once—Ruth and Rachel and Potiphar's wife, not to mention Lot's.

You bet Caudle had no contempt for Mrs. Caudle, nor Mantalini for the madame.

We need not go so far back as Cleopatra and Aspasia except to remark that in their day they cut a rather wide swath around Alexandria and Athens, and appear no small bunch of sadishes on both the dramatic stage and the historic page. Moll Pitcher was a bumner in American history and Sal Jennings a loller in English history; Meg Merrilies was no slouch. Does Catharine of Russia count for nothing, nor Maria Theresa of Austria, nor Elizabeth and Victoria of Britain, among feminine sovereigns?

Gracious, here come trooping in at the door, their bright eyes shining and their rosy cheeks glowing, Jessie Brown of Lucknow and Jeanie Deans of Midlothian, and Ethel Newcome and Lucy Fontain and Florence Dombey. God bless their sweet souls, each and every one!—Louisville Courier Journal.

Protect the House Wren.

The rich, bubbling song of the house wren is one of the sweetest sounds in country life. It behooves the farmer's boy to provide wren boxes, the entrances to which are about an inch in diameter, nailing these in the gables of barns and outhouses and orchard trees. Grasshoppers, beetles, caterpillars, bugs and spiders are the bird's principal items of food, but cutworms, weevils, ticks and plant lice are eaten in large quantities.

Exaggerated Evils of Insomnia.

Of the five minor exciting causes of functional nerve disease insomnia is the chief, and its intrinsic evil effect is invariably exaggerated by the importance attached to it by the sufferer himself. If a man does not mind lying awake quite half the mischief is obviated, but in nervous people the idea of fatigue doubles the actual exhaustion.—Schofield's "Functional Nerve Diseases."

Uncle Eben.

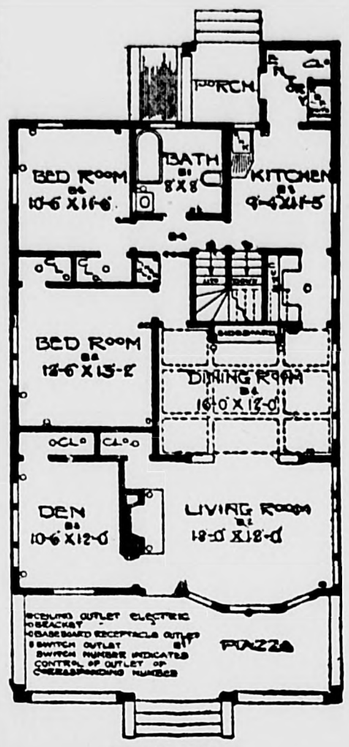

"Lookin' on de bright side o' life is all right," said Uncle Eben, "unless it gits a man to tryin' to stay awake till de last of the electric lights goes out."

A TYPICAL CALIFORNIA BUNGALOW ADAPTED TO A COLD CLIMATE.

Design 604 by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

FLOOR PLAN.

It is not difficult to adapt a southern California bungalow to a cold climate, making a typical southern home where the thermometer reaches 32 degrees below zero. This bungalow scheme is so practically laid out that it is almost needless to write a wordy description of the floor plan. There is a capacity for three bedrooms; that is, the den in front has a large closet which can be readily converted into a bedroom with a closet bed installed. This new kind of bed will be a boon to the builder in the middle walks of life. He can build a cottage of three rooms, living room, dining room and kitchen, and have a bed concealed in the closet of each room, thus giving capacity of three chambers at night and very good livable rooms during the day. Size, 30 feet wide; 44 feet deep. Full basement 7 feet deep. First story 9 feet. Second story is not figured in the cost, but would add about $900 to the entire cost if finished. Bedrooms in first story finished in red gum stained to represent Circassian walnut; living room and dining room finished in red or white oak, kitchen in birch or cypress. Maple or birch floors except kitchen, living room and dining room, which are in oak. Cost to build, exclusive of heating or plumbing, $3,000.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will furnish a copy of Saxton's new 1914 book of plans, "American Dwellings." In contains 310 designs costing from $1,000 to $6,000; also a book of interiors $1.50 per copy.

THE BELL AT LLOYD'S.

Tolls When a Ship Is Posted In the Chamber of Horrors.

One of the most interesting of bells is the one at Lloyd's, the great London marine insurance exchange. Its ringing has more significance than the sound of most bells, for it is rung only when a vessel is reported lost or when a ship long overdue and considered lost unexpectedly reaches port.

The bell now used at Lloyd's belonged to the Lutine, which was wrecked near the Zuyder Zee in October, 1799, while taking specie from English merchants to Hamburg.

There is a room at Lloyd's known as the chamber of horrors, and here are posted the telegrams that report casualties at sea. Unimportant accidents are not entered in the loss book, but the most serious are not only entered there, but are cried aloud by an official who stands in gorgeous uniform beneath the sounding board.

When after a week's disappearance it is feared that a vessel has gone down the owners make an application to the committee at Lloyd's to have the ship posted. That is done by posting up a notice in the chamber of horrors which says that the authorities would be glad of information concerning the boat.

A week elapses, and then a second notice is put up, saying that the boat has not since been heard of. When you read that a ship has been "posted" as missing you may know that declaration is upon the notice board at Lloyd's. On that day the insurance money is payable, and all who were upon her are legally considered dead. When a ship is posted the old Lutine bell is tolled once. In the very unusual event of a vessel arriving in port after being posted the bell is struck twice, and the caller makes his announcement from the rostrum amid a breathless silence.—Youth's Companion.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all the other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses of from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

This is a good time to remember the "Father of His Country" and his farewell address, "Avoid all entangling foreign alliances."

Dog days are here in good earnest and so are the dogs: regardless of statute laws they roam the streets at large without collar or mark, and quite evidently many of them without the formality of a license. Are we waiting for a panic?

In view of the prospect of a continued embargo on foreign travel and sight-seeing, this is now a good time for the American sight-seer to get some idea of the grandeur and beauty of his home land as no country in the world furnishes as much grandeur and beauty as may be found between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Shades of the fatners who "Remembered the Sabbath Day to Keep it Holy!!! We are, or have been advocates of recreation, enjoyable pastimes and athletic development, but when Weymouth has a base ball team which will schedule itself to go out of town, or even in town, and play a matched game of baseball on Sunday it is time to call a halt on raising money to educate young men for that purpose.

Secretary Redfield in speaking of the advance in prices says, "It is probable that any effect that war may have on prices, will be only temporary." There may possibly have been, and now is, a reason for advance in some commodities and that on articles which we could dispense with without suffering, but no man can get along without bread and there exists now and has not been any reasonable excuse for the advance in bread stuff with which the country is glutted

The Panama canal is now practically completed and is the most wonderful demonstration of the power of mind over matter the world has ever seen. Other nations sought to acheive the gigantic work but failed in their undertaking. United States finances and United States brains have made it a success and now it is quite evident that for the United States and for the world, it was a proper thing for it to have been done as it was and still more proper that the nation which built it should own it and have absolute control of its management and uses.

Tax rates in cities and towns are coming in slowly and most of them show an increase. The Revere Journal congratulates itself on the slight increase of 60 cents per thousand and sums the situation up as follows:—"Aside from the increase in the cost of labor and materials, there is another factor that is in part responsible for the increases. The scope of municipal activities has been extended. They are no longer confined to maintaining schools, sewers, streets, police and fire departments. The provisions for widows' pensions, the suppression of tuberculosis, maintenance of playgrounds, technical training, etc., have added greatly to the amount of money to be raised annually for public purposes."

"While about it, why not reduce the cost (and also the quality) of living by using whale oil instead of kerosine? Down with the trusts!" The writer of the above ought to have been born long ago. Before the advent of the Standard Oil Co. we paid 60 cents per gallon for a cheap whale oil and 80 cents for good sperm oil. At the same time, refined white sugar was almost unknown and it was the coarse brown sugar at 9 cents a pound or molasses instead of nice white sugar at 5 1-2 cents a pound. We either walked or paid from $1 to $2 for a team if we had a mile or two to go, but now we ride all over town for a nickel. Standard Oil Co., Sugar Refinery Co. and the R. R. Co. may have their faults but the world would be set back 100 years without combined capital in business.

ENDORSED AT HOME.

Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Weymouth Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experiences when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Weymouth, adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

Dennis Kiley, 19 Common street., says: "There is no question that Doan's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for kidney trouble. I have used them on several occasions when my kidneys were out of order and have found them beneficial. I hope that others suffering from kidney trouble will give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Kiley had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Fraulein Becker's Ruse

By F. A. MITCHEL

Fraulein Anna Becker was sitting in her boudoir in Berlin embroidering when, looking out through the window, she saw a wasp waisted lieutenant stop at her door. There was something in his manner which was very serious and indicated that he was calling on important business. She had never seen him before, but her brother Carl was an army officer, and she knew that the stranger called on some business for him. Presently a maid brought in a card bearing the name of Herman Borngesser for Lieutenant Carl Becker. Fraulein Anna went to receive Herr Borngesser and told him that her brother was not at home. She would be happy to deliver any message Herr Lieutenant had for him.

"Will you kindly give your brother my card?" he said.

"Anything for him to do?"

"He will understand."

"Are you sure? Is there not something that will make his understanding the matter sure?"

Herr Lieutenant glanced at the ceiling for inspiration.

"You might say, fraulein, that it concerns an occurrence last night at the officers' quarters."

"With whom?"

"Captain Koch."

"I will give him the message with pleasure," said the young lady, and Herr Lieutenant marched away congratulating himself that he had acquitted himself with great discretion.

Fraulein Anna had learned from him all she wished to know, which was that her brother, a hot headed youth who was bitterly opposed to her engagement with Captain Koch, had picked a quarrel with him, had insulted him and the visitor had brought a challenge from the latter.

Fraulein's first act was to send her brother away on a fool's errand by sending him a telegram with his sweetheart's name attached, saying that she must see him at once. But since the sweetheart lived fifty miles from Berlin Lieutenant Becker must necessarily be away some time. The second move was to send word in her brother's name that he would meet Captain Koch the next morning at 5 o'clock at a certain place where duels between army officers were usually fought.

Now, though Anna Becker's features were not very like those of her brother, her height and weight were nearly the same. That evening, dressed in one of his uniforms and with a dozen of his cards in her card case, she sallied forth to put in practice a certain plan she had conceived. Entering a restaurant, she ordered a dinner with a bottle of wine. Presently she arose and threw the contents of her glass in the face of a quiet looking gentleman sitting near her.

"What does this mean?" he asked.

"It means that you stared at me in an insulting manner," replied Anna, and, throwing her brother's card on a table, she left the restaurant.

Two hours later when Anna returned to her home she had insulted six persons, and between 9 o'clock and midnight four challenges came in from different persons for Lieutenant Becker, two of them from army officers, all of whom fraulein agreed to meet the next morning at the time and place she had agreed that her brother should meet her lover.

When midnight came and Carl did not return Fraulein Anna felt sure that her ruse to get him out of the way had been successful. But it had only been partly so. When Lieutenant Borngesser returned to Captain Koch and reported what he had done the captain sent him out to find Becker himself. He came upon Becker in the billiard room of the officers' club just as he was reading the dispatch from his sweetheart that had been sent him by Anna. Consulting a time table, he found he could keep both appointments and agreed to meet Captain Koch at 6 o'clock the next morning at the usual place for the settlement of affairs of honor among officers of the army.

Koch noticed a discrepancy in the time of meeting between the written and verbal reply to his challenge, but thought little of it, though, that he might surely be on hand for the fray, he went to the ground at 5 o'clock. A quarter of an hour later a gentleman, with attendants, appeared and informed the captain that he had come to meet Lieutenant Becker, who had insulted him the evening before.

While Captain Koch was disputing with this man as to which of them should fight Lieutenant Becker first another party arrived on the same errand, and before 6 o'clock three different persons had arrived, each desirous of "pig sticking" (as they call it in Germany) Lieutenant Becker. At a quarter before 6 Becker himself appeared, having been traveling all night, to find five persons waiting to avenge themselves upon him, four of whom he had never seen.

Amid a babel of tongues a carriage arrived, and Fraulein Anna stepped out in the ordinary costume of a woman and stood looking at the disputants and laughing. When she had explained that she had replied to the captain's challenge and had insulted the four other challengers all except Koch and Becker joined in the laugh. But to please the lady the four strangers insisted on the two most interested making up their quarrel, and they shook hands.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

Any time in the year is the right time to begin planning for an asparagus plot.

Save every bit of the hen manure. Keep it dry and put it on some crop next spring. Worth its weight in gold

Many farmers who have been growing fruit for years do not know that the apple and most other fruit trees form fruit buds in the late summer months.

Apples keep best when allowed to hang on the trees until they reach maturity, but that does not mean soft and ripe. It is a common fallacy that green, immature fruit will keep the best.

Good cultivation during the summer will cause fruit trees, bushes and vines to grow new wood and form new buds for next season's fruit crop. Cultivation should cease at the end of the summer so the wood will have time to develop and harden before freezing weather.

The hum of the busy little honeybee should be heard on every farm. A moderate amount of care given to these industrious workers will help out considerably in these days of the high cost of living by providing a supply of the most delicious and healthful of all sweets for the table.

The silo, the first appliance to adapt itself to concrete, has grown enormously in size. One of the biggest of them is 62 feet high and has walls that are 8 inches thick. It will hold enough ensilage to fatten five carloads of beef cattle. It only took a month to build it and its total cost was but $600.

If winter oats can be grown with general success in central latitudes, they should prove a very valuable crop. Spring sown oats are valuable when they can be sown early enough and the spring season is moist and favorable for rapid growth and full maturity.

Pumpkins are merely a water crop—a sort of pleasant salad for the stock which is laxative at the time that the autumn grass is dried up. On the whole, it is doubtful if their cultivation pays. If they could be stored as a winter crop they would take the place of the usual "roots."

All things being equal, hens of the same breed should moult at practically the same time. The season usually starts in August and continues for about 100 days. That is to say, that length of time will be consumed from the first falling of feathers to the completion of the coat.

A Roman nose in a horse, like the corresponding acquiline contour in a man, generally indicates strong individuality, often accompanied with great intelligence. A straight, facial line is quite as often found with a high degree of intelligence, but a dished faced horse is rarely anything but a nonentity in character—a fool!

To learn to handle horses well, you must know harnesses and their working parts well. You must know how to adjust harnesses to make it fit and work on a certain horse perfectly. All horses are not of the same shape and size and no two are seldom ever in the same degree or flesh. Harness that one horse might work in with perfect comfort might cause severe discomfort to another horse. The horse must always be made perfectly comfortable.

Covering grass seeds of any kind is important, although in many cases it is simply sown broadcast on the ground and allowed to lie and be covered by the rain or by accident. As a rule, in the fall of the year the soil is mealier and in a better physical state to cover seed as fine as grass seed, while in the spring of the year it is usually too wet and sticky for this purpose, although seed, sown very early in the spring or in late winter, is often well covered by the movement of the surface soil in freezing.

Soil robbery by raising "money crops" has cost this country billions of dollars in decreased fertility of farms. The obviously practical formula for farming is to sell as few raw products as possible and as many finished products. In other words, feed the meat producing crops upon the farm, keeping soil fertile and getting profit out of the sale of beef cattle, milk, butter, eggs, poultry, rather than from grain dumped upon the market from the field at the purchaser's price.

A Gentleman Chauffeur

A Story of the Purchase of Mexican Oil Lands

By F. A. MITCHEL

Cuthbert Harrington, a portly gentleman with mutton chop whiskers, partly gray hair, florid complexion indicating high living and making a fine contrast with an azure polka dot neck scarf, sat in his private office in a skyscraper not far from Wall street, New York, opening his mail. He put the letters in different baskets as he read them till he came to one that arrested his earnest attention. He pondered over it for some time, then tapped a bell.

"Tell Mr. Erskine I would like to see him," he said to the attendant who entered.

Mr. Erskine, a tall, slender man with a shirt collar so high that it seemed to have pushed his hair back from his forehead, entered with a serious look on his face. No one of Mr. Harrington's subordinates ever entered his presence without appearing to suppose that he had been called for a purpose of supreme importance.

"Mr. Erskine," said the magnate, "I have a letter from Mexico this morning from Perkins saying that Manuel Furtado is very ill and likely to die."

"Senor Furtado is dead," replied Erskine, with unheard of daring, venturing to interrupt his chief.

"Dead! How do you know that?"

"His death is mentioned in the morning papers."

"What! Furtado dead! I didn't see it. Let me have the paper."

A journal was produced and the item pointed out.

"Erskine," said Harrington, turning to his subordinate, "this is a crisis in the oil industry of Mexico. Furtado owned the most valuable petroleum lands in that distracted country. There will be a race between some one sent out by me and some one sent by Sir Oliver Tisdale's British combination to buy these lands that belong to the Furtado estate. It is well known that the prospective heirs have wished these lands sold, but Furtado would sell nothing. General Grant said that victory in war depends on getting there first with the most men. In this case victory for us depends upon who gets there first with the most money."

"We are nearer Mexico than England."

"In this case we are at the same distance. Joe Blinker has kept me advised that John Handiside, the Tisdale manager here, has long been trying to get possession of this property. He will send"—

The door opened, and a clerk entered.

"Joseph Blinker says that he has important information for you, sir."

"Send him right in."

Mr. Blinker was about twenty-five years old, stupid looking, but a close observer would have remarked a crafty eye. He was a spy of Mr. Harrington's in Mr. Handiside's employ.

"What is it, Joe?" asked Mr. Harrington eagerly.

Joe instinctively looked at the walls and the ceiling for an eavesdropper, then said:

"Mr. Handiside is leaving by train this evening for Mexico."

"The deuce you say! How do you know that?"

"I was directed to purchase his sleeping section and his ticket."

"But how do you know they are for Mr. Handiside?"

"I was directed to engage a cab to be at his house at 5 o'clock this afternoon."

"How much of all this have you done?"

"Bought the tickets."

"How about the cab?" asked Mr. Erskine.

"I have not yet ordered it."

"Mr. Harrington," said Erskine, "may I have a few moments' conversation with you?"

"Yes. Joe, wait outside."

When alone Mr. Erskine said: "This information gives us a fine advantage. We may possibly delay Mr. Handiside while some one leaves by the evening train empowered to buy the Furtado property."

"How delay Handiside?"

"Let Joe give me the order for the cab. I will manage the rest."

"I think I see your point."

"Whom will you send?"

"Whom will I send? Why, I'll go myself! Whoever gets the Furtado property will own what turns the scale of a monopoly of the oil product of Mexico. The matter is altogether too important to trust to a subordinate. Now tell me how you propose to delay Handiside."

The door was locked to avoid interruption, and the two men went into secret conference.

* * * * * * *

"Sue," said Hugh Erskine, who surprised his wife by going home to luncheon, "I have a bit of work for you this afternoon."

"What is it?"

Erskine told his wife of the rivalry for the oil property in Mexico, unfolded his plan to delay Handiside and explained how he wished her assistance. Then he lunched and went to the garage in the rear of his house.

"Carl," he said to his chauffeur, "I wish you to take a note to a man on Staten Island. You needn't hurry. Take the whole afternoon."

When Carl had departed his master began an examination of his cars, selecting a closed one, on which he began to make certain changes. He sent for a locksmith, whom he directed to fix the locks to the doors so that they could not be opened from the inside. This done, Erskine drove a nail into the sash of every window so that it could not be opened. Next he bored a hole from behind the driver's seat into the interior of the car. Having finished all this, he went to a drug store and purchased a rubber bulb and tube.

Mr. Erskine then went to his dressing room, where he found his wife with cosmetics ready to make him up so that he would not be recognized for himself. He was smooth shaven, and his wife had no difficulty in fixing on him a beard. His hair was light, and she blackened it with pomade. Then he got into a suit of his chauffeur's clothes that he had brought from the garage and, after surveying himself in a pier glass, went out to get the car he had altered.

At the appointed hour Chauffeur Erskine pulled up at the residence of the representative of Sir Oliver Tisdale's British oil corporation. The front door was opened, a gentleman whom Erskine recognized as Mr. Handiside came out, kissed his hand to his wife who appeared at an upper window and got into the car, giving his directions before closing the door.

Mr. Handiside was being driven through a narrow street leading down to the Hudson river when there was a puff and the car was filled with a fine powder. Astonished, he tried to let down a window. It could not be moved. Then he tried the one on the other side of the car. This, too, was stuck fast. He rapped on the partition between him and the chauffeur. No response was accorded him. Lastly, he tried to open a door and failed.

Meanwhile Mr. Handiside was breathing in the powder that filled the car. It had been injected by the chauffeur, who had squeezed a rubber bulb, forcing it through the tube, an end of which had been inserted into a hole bored in the partition. The man inside began to feel languid, drowsy, and his efforts to get out of the car relaxed. Finally he passed into dreamland.

When Mr. Handiside came out of his trance it was pitch dark. He was lying on what was evidently a bed, but his surroundings, being invisible, he could not see them. He got up and felt about him till he came to a door and, turning the knob, opened it and looked into a dimly lighted corridor. Returning to the room, by the increased light he saw a dresser, and on it were matches. Lighting one, he stood before an electric switch and turned on more light.

By this time it was evident to Mr. Handiside that he was in a hotel. Pushing a button, he called for some one from below. A bellboy responded, who called the night clerk, and Mr. Handiside was informed that the evening before a chauffeur had driven up to the hotel, said that he had a fare who was ill and begged to be permitted to leave the invalid till his family could be communicated with. The landlord had consented, and Mr. Handiside had been carried in and put to bed. The chauffeur had gone off to bring a doctor, but had not returned. Since the invalid seemed to be gently sleeping he was left to himself.

Day was breaking, and Mr. Handiside, feeling weak, decided to return to his bed. At 8 o'clock he arose, called up his own chauffeur by telephone and was driven to his home to break the news of his strange adventure to his wife.

How near Mr. Handiside's surmises as to the cause of his experience were to the truth is not known. He certainly never knew who had been his chauffeur in his ineffectual effort to reach the railway station. He took the next through train southward, but somehow he had a feeling that the delay he had been subjected to would be fatal to his buying the Furtado oil lands.

Meanwhile Cuthbert Harrington, dressed in somewhat shabby traveling clothes and a felt hat pulled down over his eyes, was driven to the station, where he entered a private compartment in a sleeping car. He reached his destination without having been recognized, and the morning after the funeral of Manuel Furtado appeared at the home of the deceased man's oldest son, and after an effort that lasted ten hours succeeded in getting the property at a price the heirs never had dreamed of. The papers were signed sealed and delivered at 10 o'clock that night, when Mr. Harrington went to bed to sleep the sleep, if not of the just, at least of the winner.

The next morning he called on young Furtado to say goodby before going to the station, and while standing in the patio who should come through the large Mexican doorway but Mr. Handiside.

"Good morning, Mr. Handiside," said the American magnate. "Come to buy the Furtado oil lands? There's the principal heir to the property right there. Mr. Handiside, Senor Furtado."

With this Mr. Harrington took his departure, was driven to the station and returned to New York.

Hugh Erskine was well to do before he demeaned himself to become Mr. Handiside's chauffeur, but this service made him a double millionaire. Mrs. Erskine has since assumed a leadership in New York society. She says she made more by dressing her husband once than she ever made in dressing herself in all her life.

As for the Furtado heirs, though they became rich by the sale of their lands they have been miserable ever since that they did not get more.

Novelties in Old Fleet Street.

Fleet street was formerly the wonder place of London, where all that was novel, bizarre and marvelous was exhibited by enterprising showmen. Ben Jonson alludes to "a new notion of the city of Nineveh, with Jonah and the whale, at Fleet bridge," and at the "Eagle and Child" was exhibited a collection of freaks and monstrosities that set the whole town agape. In 1710, too, were advertised as on exhibition at Fleet bridge "two strange, wonderful and remarkable monstrous creatures, an old she dromedary, seven feet high and ten feet long, lately arrived from Tartary, with her young one, being the greatest wonder, rarity and novelty ever seen in the three kingdoms."—London Express.

Worse Off Than He Thought.

Shadbolt—Well, I'm $50 worse off than I was yesterday morning. Dingus—How's that? Shadbolt—I was held up by footpads on my way home last night and robbed. Dingus—I'm sorry for you, old man. But they didn't get the $5 I borrowed of you before you started home, anyhow. Shadbolt—That's so. I forgot that. I'm $55 worse off than I was yesterday morning.—Chicago Tribune.

A Matter of Feet.

"If one did not know better," remarked an observant man, "he would be inclined to believe an aviator is akin to a centipede. Not long ago I was telling a friend that a certain airman had dropped forty-five feet. 'Yes?' he asked. 'And how many has he left?'"—New York Tribune.

STICKY FEET OF THE FLY.

Why the Germ Laden Pest Constantly Rubs and Brushes Them.

Before the men of science terrified the world with their talk of germs most people thought that the housefly was a harmless creature and very cleanly in his habits, since he seemed to spend a great part of his time in cleaning his legs, but since public opinion has turned against him some explanation has to be found for his apparent cleanliness. Says the Bibliothek der Unterhaltung und des Wissens:

"The fact that a fly can walk on a glazed or slippery perpendicular surface has long been a matter of observation. It was at first thought that the fine hairs that cover his legs were so small that they could enter the pores of the smoothest surface and in that way bear the weight of his body. Later it was thought that a sticky fluid was secreted by the feet, which caused them to adhere slightly to the wall. The advent of the microscope has made it possible to observe the precise facts about the fly's unusual powers.

"It is true that the fly's feet secrete a kind of grease, but not in a liquid form. Each leg has from 1,600 to 2,000 minute hairs, and each hair carries a certain amount of this fat. When the fly lights on a smooth surface the whole mass of hairs adheres to it, and each individual hair can be seen under the microscope to leave a distinct grease spot, which has a little circular mark in its center made by the hair itself.

"With such sticky feet it is naturally the case that the fly collects a good deal of dust in the course of his daily perambulations. If he wishes to walk on glass or upside down on the ceiling he must spend a few hours every day keeping his feet clean of this coating of dirt."

Spoiled His Chance.

"Why don't you propose to that girl? You like her, and I'm sure she would have you."

"All true, but there is an insuperable obstacle between us."

"All family or religious objections can be overcome."

"Nothing like that. I got a little too gay when I first met her and told her I was getting $50 a week whereas I am getting only $25."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mozart's Delusion.

During the last months of his life Mozart imagined a man stood always by him to compel him to compose his own requiem. Mozart played his harpsichord when three years of age, at the age of five composed concertos and at six made a concert tour in Vienna. Extremely nervous, the musician was so weak that at times he would faint without any apparent cause.—New York Telegram.

Better Than That.

"Girls ought to be taught how to stand and hold themselves. I suppose, Mrs. Comeup, you want your daughter to have a good carriage?"

"Indeed, she don't need none. We can afford to buy her an automobile now."—Baltimore American.

Easily Remedied.

Creditor—Still no money? Look here, I'm mighty tired of this everlasting waiting. Debtor—Tired? John, fetch a chair for the gentleman.—Fliegende Blatter.

They Brush the Clouds.

Mr. Foggy London—What causes the delightfully clear weather you have in New York? Mr. Man Hattan—Sky scrapers, dear boy.—Life.

Labor relieves us from three great evils—ennui, vice and want.—French Proverb.

Relic of Great Russian Ruler.

At Christie's, London, a Jacobean oak chair was sold for 19 guineas. The chair, according to a description, was made from the timber of a wreck, and the craftsman is said to have been Peter the Great, while he was a tenant of John Evelyn at Sayes Court, Deptford.

The Interference of Kitty

She Was Forgiven

By JOSIAH T. NEWCOMB

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

I.

The galleries were packed to suffocation. The lobby and even the senate floor were crowded. A sharp fight was expected over the merger bill, notwithstanding the confidence of the head of the promoting syndicate, who arrived the night before and established headquarters in a nearby hotel, and of Colonel Moulton, the chairman of the state committee, who kept the run of things from his office on the second floor of the capitol. Both believed they had the situation well in hand until they heard about Kittinger. Then they talked with each other over well guarded telephones, and Moulton sent for the senator.

Neither the first nor a second message brought him. The chairman put on his hat and walked to the governor's room.

"We are beaten. I suppose you know," Moulton said without preface as he sat down.

"Kittinger has been here," answered the governor.

"What excuse did he give?"

"I did not hear him give any."

"Didn't you discuss the bill with him? Didn't you ask him what is the matter with him?"

"No."

"Then I'd like to know what did you talk about?"

"He did most of the talking. I told him that he was foolish not to see you."

"He isn't coming, then?"

"No. He said he wouldn't."

"George, do you know what this means to us?" the colonel demanded.

"I know what you think it means."

"Yes, and I'm right. It means that you lose the United States senatorship and that we go out of business. That's what it means."

The governor swung around in his chair wearily.

"I suppose you didn't come here just to tell me that again," he said.

"No, I didn't. I did not know that you had seen Kittinger. Anyway, it does not matter. Send for him now, and ask him to vote for the merger."

The governor walked to the window and looked out across the long stretch of dull brown lawn.

"I guess I'll keep out of it, Fred," he answered presently without turning around.

Just then the door opened, and a girl of twenty stood on the threshold. She held her long riding skirt in her hand.

"Joe said it was important and that I mustn't interrupt, but father promised to go riding with me this morning as soon as he finished his mail. You will forgive me, won't you?"

II.

A little later, when the merger bill was reached on the senate calendar, the majority leader blandly asked that the measure be laid aside for the present. Nobody objected, and the disappointed crowd filed grumblingly out of the galleries. Though they did not understand the delay, few believed that the merger was really beaten. This was the outside view. On the inside Colonel Moulton, Sanderson, head of the promoting syndicate; the governor and two or three others knew that without Kittinger's vote there was a tie. If he voted no the bill was lost.

"Well, find out what he wants," growled Sanderson when the situation was explained to him.

But nobody cared to undertake the task. Kittinger did not understand the game, they felt; and, besides, he might be against the bill on principle. They had heard of such things.

"Can't you call it up when Kittinger is absent?" suggested Sanderson.

They considered this, but not hopefully. The lieutenant governor could be depended upon for the casting vote, but Kittinger was never absent.

III.

Within half an hour after her return from the ride with her father Kitty Millard knew that in respect to the merger bill she had unwittingly put her dainty little foot into it. Such details of the situation as she failed to get from her father she skillfully extracted from Colonel Moulton. She took at face value all that the colonel said about the bearing of the merger bill on her father's political fortunes. This is the reason why she marched into Moulton's office the next morning and offered her services to help pass the bill.

"I'm afraid, though," she admitted, "that I can't do much with father. He has made up his mind not to interfere. He told me that."

"I don't just see, then"— began Moulton.

"No, I know you don't," answered Miss Millard, "though you are an old dear. I'm going to capture your senator for you. I've made up my mind."

"Do you know him?"

"Just. I've met him at dinner once or twice. How much time do you give me?"

Moulton was ready to catch at straws, which accounts for his answering seriously.

"If we cannot pass the bill by this time next month we never can," he said.

"Very well," said Miss Millard.

"I wish you luck," said the colonel.

Kittinger was young, and at first things went swimmingly. He was assigned to take her into dinner an evening or two after the temporary defeat of the merger bill.

Among the privileges enjoyed by those who were crowned with Kitty's royal favor was a license to ride with her in the mornings.

She was unconventional as to grooms. On the morning Kittinger rode with her, for the fourth or fifth time since their more intimate acquaintance began, they went alone.

It was mad riding from the beginning. Kitty intended that it should be. It is useless to excuse or extenuate her conduct. Any defense would fall below the documentary evidence of her guilt in the form of a scribbled note to Colonel Moulton dispatched the night before. It said:

Call up your bill early tomorrow. He will be absent part of the session.

KITTY.

The start was early, and they were a good distance from town when Kitty saw the young senator look at his watch. As he shut it with a determined snap the horse that Kitty rode gave an unexpected jump, and the bridle broke. The spirited black went into the air, then sped wildly down the road, headed from town. Kitty cast a wild, appealing glance behind her, with a pitiful little cry, and clung to the saddle.

For perhaps a mile Kittinger was unable to overtake them. Then came an accident which could not have been planned, however dark a view is taken of Kitty's conduct. A team, dragging a long timber wagon, occupied nearly all of the narrow highway. The black swerved suddenly, and Kitty landed in a heap at the side of the road.

Kittinger had forgotten the senate, the merger bill, his public duties, everything except Kitty's danger. He ran to her and lifted her in his arms, and he was conscious of a great thrill of joy and relief, for she opened her eyes and spoke.

"I'm not hurt in the least," she said. But when she tried to stand on her feet she promptly sank back into Kittinger's arms and fainted dead away.

IV.

Kittinger reached the senate chamber an hour after the merger bill had been called up and passed. Extras were already in the street announcing it.

Kittinger was furious. He rose to a question of personal privilege and denounced the proceeding as a dastardly trick. The leader of the majority, in reply, declared that he was surprised and grieved at the unwarranted charge. He disliked, however, to impute malice to any one, and therefore he would put it down to the youth and inexperience of the senator. Kittinger, unconvinced, marched out of the chamber and down to the office of Colonel Moulton. That genial gentleman, however, was not present to listen to his denunciation. The room was empty, but Kittinger's eye took in at a single glance a scrap of paper carelessly left lying on the chairman's desk. It was Kitty's note to Moulton, and the single glance told Kittinger its contents.

He knew the handwriting. He knew the signature. He rushed out of the room with feelings hard to describe.

V.

For three days an impatient young woman with a plaster cast on her ankle sat up in bed at frequent intervals to look at cards which came with deluges of flowers and fruits and dainty trifles, only to fling them aside and sink back again to her pillows, wholly unsatisfied.

When the doctor announced her recovery from the shock and permitted her to be dressed it was a penitent and remorseful Kitty who wrote a pitiful little note to Senator Kittinger. She said that she had a confession to make and would he please come to her and listen to it; after which he alone should decide what was to be done.

Senator Kittinger came. His indignation lasted until he reached the room where she awaited him, propped up with pillows. She was quite pale, and she extended a wan little hand to him timidly, for she was not sure that he would take it.

He did take it, and on the instant all his anger died out, for he saw again the great black horse with bridle dangling, thundering down the highway and after a huddled little figure lying by the roadway and not stirring for what seemed an eternity until he lifted it in his arms.

And so he held the small hand tightly and went down on one knee beside her, and the only words of reproach which he spoke were:

"Kitty, Kitty, how could you? It was terrible! You might have killed yourself!"

"Wait!" she said. "You do not know how bad I am—how wicked!"

"Yes, I do," he mumbled through the small fingers. But she did not heed.

"You think that I was reckless. That was nothing—nothing. I did not mean to fall off and be hurt, but I broke the bridle on purpose. I planned the runaway. I intended to keep you from getting back in time. I did it deliberately."

"I know all about it," said Kittinger. Kitty looked puzzled.

"You—kissed me—after you knew?" she inquired wonderingly.

He kissed her again to convince her.

A few minutes later Governor Millard himself came in. Kittinger was still half kneeling beside the low chair, and there were explanations.

Presently, when Kittinger was taking his departure, the governor called him back.

"By the way, senator," he said, "I have a piece of news which may interest you."

"Yes?" said Kittinger.

"I have just vetoed the merger bill," said the governor.

A PLOW THAT RANG TRUE.

It Likewise Proved Its Quality to the Buenos Aires Buyers.

In Buenos Aires a few years ago an American salesman of plows wished to demonstrate to a local customer the superiority of his goods over that of a German competitor. The American consul arranged for the test.

The German plows proved to be almost exact duplicates of the American implement in design and rather better in finish. Wasting no time in explanation, the American salesman called over a powerful peon and ordered him to swing with all his strength with a ten pound sledge upon the share of one of the American plows.

The husky Basque spat upon his hands, hunched his muscular shoulders, swung the heavy hammer in a wide circle and brought it down on the spot indicated. A note as clear as that of a bell rang out and the plow went bounding across the floor, but save for the patch of red paint that fused to and came off on the hammer head the share was unmarked. When the operation was repeated upon one of the German implements the first share was completely shattered, the pieces being scattered about the floor like so much broken crockery. Thinking that possibly the faultiness of this share had been an accident of construction, perhaps of overtempering, the dealer requested the peon to swing upon the second sample. This blow demonstrated that the German implements were not even consistent in their effectiveness, for this share doubled up under the blow and folded lovingly in around the hammer like a flower going to sleep at night.

There were tears in the consul's eyes as he wrung the salesman's hand in congratulation, but all he said was, "And they still accuse us of exporting wooden nutmegs!"—World's Work.

SHOCKED THE JUSTICE.

And Was Taught a Lesson by a Member of the Supreme Court.

How the justices of the United States supreme court deal with any attempt at an assault upon the confidences of the court was disclosed to an indiscreet young woman who was visiting at the house of an associate justice of the court who had known her since she was a child. She was sitting at the tea table one afternoon with the justice and his wife and, all unconscious of any wrongdoing, began to talk about a case that was awaiting the decision of the court.

The wife of the justice exhibited as much alarm and distress as though a live dynamite bomb had been introduced into the company, but she could not catch her visitor's eye and stop her.

"I hope," said the prattling visitor, "that you will decide it in favor of the —— company, because if you don't the price of the stock auntie left me will go down."

The justice froze stiff. He assumed what his wife calls his "prisoner at the bar manner" as he stood up. He was as grave and as stern as could be, and he nearly scared the young woman to death as he said:

"My dear child, you must never speak on such a subject to me again. I am going to leave the room now as a mark of my displeasure at the disrespect you have shown me and my position, and if you are ever so thoughtless again as to refer to the business of the court in my presence I shall see that you are never admitted to the house afterward."—World's Work.

One or the Other.

"I've just had a queer telegram from my daughter."

"What's wrong with it?"

"I don't know. Here it is. I'll read it to you: 'Zimersogoliamnovdfhjkptuwxy.'"

"What on earth do you s'pose it means?"

"Why, it either means that the wires are crossed or else she's engaged to a Russian nobleman."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

To the Honorable the Board of Selectmen of Weymouth.

Respectfully represents the Bay State Street Railway Company:

That it owns and operates street railway tracks in Weymouth and desires an extension, alteration and relocation thereof in Washington and Broad Streets in said Weymouth:

Wherefore, your petitioners, as such Street Railway Company, prays for an extension, alteration and relocation of its tracks in Washington and Broad Streets, constituting a double track location, from a point at or near the junction of Washington and Commercial Streets to a point in Washington Street at or near the end of the State Highway layout, southerly of Lincoln Square, so called, and in Broad Street not to exceed 200 feet easterly of Lincoln Square, so called, together with such switches, curves and cross connections as may be necessary or convenient for the operation of the cars of said Company, substantially as shown on plans filed with this petition, and to make all necessary additions to and change in poles, wires and other appliances connected therewith, and that it be granted the right to operate said tracks with electricity as the motive power.

BAY STATE STREET RAILWAY COMPANY,
By P. F. Sullivan, President.

Weymouth, Mass., August 3, 1914.

Office of the Selectmen of Weymouth.
August 3, 1914.

Upon consideration of the foregoing petition, at a meeting of the board of Selectmen of Weymouth, held as above, it was ordered: That a public hearing be held at the office of the Selectmen of Weymouth on Tuesday, August twenty-fifth, nineteen hundred and fourteen at 7 30 o'clock p. m., for the consideration of the foregoing petition and this order thereon, and that notice of said hearing be given by publishing the same in the Weymouth Gazette and the Weymouth Times, newspapers published in said Weymouth and by serving the same by copy upon the clerk of the Bay State Street Railway Company fourteen days at least before the date of said hearing.

By order of the
SELECTMEN OF WEYMOUTH,
Bradford Hawes, Secretary.

Power and Ambition.

OWNING A HOME.

The Real Estate Man Presents His View of the Question.

The public has no better friends than the real estate agents, although individuals may sometimes think that they are a trifle persistent in their efforts to induce one to make a purchase.

In reality, however, this is where they do the greatest good, not only for the city in which they live, but for the man to whom they sell property, and this is especially true in the case of a home.

The great majority of people are too slow to realize the importance of becoming home owners, and the efforts of the real estate dealers have induced thousands to purchase who otherwise would have let splendid opportunities pass.

It is especially important that all young people become home owners at the earliest time possible, because in the strength of their youth they will have no trouble meeting the payments on a home, and in a few years they will have it paid for. On the other hand, if they fail to buy the years will pass and find them living up all they make.

Because of taxes, insurance and depreciation many people figure that it is cheaper to rent than to own a home, but since the man owning the property is willing to make that kind of investment it is pretty evident that in the long run it pays the owner.—National Real Estate Journal.

MISSED THE TRAIN.

It Was Not the Agent's Fault, Either, Only His Misfortune.

The real estate man from the city was eager to close the deal for Uncle Billy Weatherman's forty acres, which would front on a beautiful lake after the big White river dam in the Missouri Ozarks was built.

The papers lay on the table awaiting Uncle Billy's signature. The real estate man was impatient. He was in a hurry to get back to Hollister, the nearest railway station, so as to catch the only train that would get him back to Kansas City the next morning.

"Now, if you'll sign right there—on the dotted line," he said, handing a fountain pen to Uncle Billy.

Uncle Billy took out his spectacles and read the papers carefully.

"I reckon I'd better not be in too big a hurry about this hyar," he temporized, with the shrewdness of the Ozark mountaineer. "I don't read as peart as I used to. I b'lieve I'll have my sons read them papers, mister."

"It would be a great favor to me, Uncle Billy," remarked the Kansas City man, looking at his watch, "if you could manage to see them in time to finish up this transaction by noon. You see, I've got to get away today. How many sons have you, anyway?"

Uncle Billy scratched his head a minute and said, "Eighteen."—Youth's Companion.

An Early Underground Road.

London's underground railway stations are decidedly different from what they were when first built. A writer in London Society of May, 1863, describes Farringdon street station as resembling "a family vault on a large scale, with a series of hip baths introduced diagonally into it for light and ventilation. The hip baths are lined with glazed tiles, and to keep the resemblance to their prototype we find the leakage drained off at the end into a vessel something like a soap dish. A dense fog filled the place when I was there, and, as the people waiting for the trains were seen wandering up and down the platform, one might have imagined them ghosts of the great unwashed condemned to linger in sight of those lavatories they neglected in their mortal life."

Looking Ahead.

"I have just telephoned to our new neighbors to ask them if there is anything we can lend them," said Mrs. Scrimpins.

"Aren't you getting wonderfully generous?" asked her husband.

"Oh, it's just as well to be neighborly. Most of our stuff is pretty well worn, and as they moved in I saw a lot of things that will be worth having when it comes our turn to borrow."—Washington Star.

Two at One Trick.

"Let me plow this field."

"Thanks."

"I'm canvassing this district for congress," said the willing worker after finishing the field. "Do you own this fine farm?"

"Oh, no," replied the other man; "I'm the candidate on the other ticket! The farmer has gone to town, but I assured him the field would be plowed by the time he got back."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Silent Chill.

He—There's no use introducing me to any one. I can't dance.

She — What nonsense! I saw you dancing with Miss James the night before last.

"Yes, but she hasn't spoken to me since."—Life.

Corrected Him.

"Come back for something you've forgotten, as usual?" said the husband.

"No," replied his wife sweetly, "I've come back for something I remembered."

Long Wait.

Callow Youth—Barbah, how long will I have to wait for a shave? Barber (glancing at him)—Oh, about two years.—Boston Transcript.

Anger.

Anger is by no means a sign of a strong character but, on the contrary, that of a weakling whose soul, so far from getting expurgated of its revengefulness, is still more confounded by it.—Seneca.

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased, to Timothy M. Twomey of Boston in the County of Suffolk, without giving a surety on his bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Quincy, in said County of Norfolk, on the ninth day of September, A. D. 1914, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And the petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Weymouth Gazette, a newspaper published in said Weymouth, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twelfth day of August, A. D. 1914.

22-24 THOMAS V. NASH, Asst. Register.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the subscriber has been duly appointed administratrix of the estate of JOHN J. HANN late of Weymouth, in the County of Norfolk deceased, intestate, and has taken upon herself that trust by giving bond, as the law directs. All persons having demands upon the estate of said deceased are required to exhibit the same; and all persons indebted to said estate are called upon to make payment to

A TESTIMONIAL

C. A. Peabody Co., 5 Main St., Brockton, Mass.

Dear Sirs:—In reply to your favor I want to say that the "Peabody" piano that was offered by Mr. George R. Kempl two years ago and won by me is more than satisfactory in every way. The tone is beautiful and seems to grow better as I use it. I would certainly recommend this piano to anybody who wants a first-class instrument.

Yours very truly,

ALICE G. CORRIDAN.

3rd ANNUAL FIELD DAY.

Old Colony Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Hingham and Wildey and Crescent Lodges of This Town Hold Gala Reunion last Saturday.

A most enjoyable and successful field day and reunion was held at Lovell's corner last Saturday under the auspices of the Crescent, Wildey and Old Colony I O. O. F. lodges.

The days events opened in the afternoon at 2.30 when two ball games and a long list of sports were carried out.

At baseball the Old Colony lodge of Hingham defeated the Wildey lodge of South Weymouth 3 to 2. The batteries were Shallis and Stoddard for Old Colony and Ells and Loud for Wildey. In the second contest Crescent lodge of East Weymouth shut out Old Colony lodge 4 to 0. The batteries in this game were McFaun and Gardner for the winners and Linscott and Stoddard for the losers.

A fine list of sports was run off in fast time, resulting as follows: 50 yd. dash, boys under twelve, Maurice Stone 1st, John Chisholm 2nd.

50 yd. dash, girls under twelve, Louise Lane 1st, Ellene Hanniford 2nd.

50 yd. dash, boys over 12, Leo Miller 1st, Roy Adams 2nd.

50 yd. dash, girls over 12, Louise Poole 1st, Elsie Thoms 2nd.

Peanut race for girls, Susan Clark 1st, Louise Poole 2nd.

High jump for men, Raymond Proctor 1st, Clement Gardner 2nd.

Hop, step and jump, Raymond Proctor 1st, Clement Gardner 2nd.

High jump for boys, Roy David 1st, Horace Turner 2nd.

Standing broad jump for men, Raymond Proctor 1st, Warren Hanniford 2nd.

Standing broad jump for boys, Roy David 1st, Horace Turner 2nd.

Hop step and jump for boys, Roy David 1st, Malcolm French 2nd.

During the afternoon the Emerson Shoe band of Rockland gave a very pleasing concert.

Refreshments were served throughout the day.

In the evening dancing was enjoyed on a dance board with the orchestra from Crescent lodge, I. O. O. F. furnishing music.

A most enjoyable day was reported by all, and each and everyone of those present last Saturday are looking forward to the 4th annual in 1915.

The committee in charge of the big event consisted of B. N. Ells, Roy Sherman, A. T. Sampson, L. W. Callahan, W. F. Tirrell, Charles Taylor, Harry Ellis Bearce, Charles Abbott, Henry C. Pratt, Oliver Horton, James A. Monroe, Attwood Hunt, Byron Linscott and R. D. Anderson.

CLAPP IN AGAIN 2 to 1.

Fast Tilton A. C. Bows To Pitching of Ray Condrick. Drinkwater's Triple Wins For Clapp.

In one of the finest and best played games of the entire season, the Clapp Memorial nine pinned a 2 to 1 defeat on the fast Tilton A. C. nine of Boston on the C. M. A. grounds last Saturday afternoon.

Ray Condrick was on the mound for the locals and pitched superb ball through out. He fanned 15 batters, passed but two and allowed seven hits.

Neither side scored until the last of the eighth when Clapp got two tallies. Reilly, first batter, fanned. Fraher got on by a single over second. Drinkwater tripled over the centerfielder's head scoring "Toby". Moralles hit a long sacrifice fly to left and Drinkwater scored. Condrick was thrown out by the second baseman.

Tilton made a hard try in their half of the ninth. Cyr, first up, singled. Atchinson fanned, Cyr stealing second on the third strike. Smith singled to left and fast work by Holly Moralles, held Cyr at third. On a throw to Deane by Fraher that went wide, Cyr scored the visitor's only run. Smith stole second and third but Edwards whiffed and Condrick threw out Scheyler. The summary:

C. M. A.—Deane 1b, Reilly ss, Fraher c, Drinkwater 3b, Moralles lf, Condrick p, Gorman 2b, Vender cf, Bumpus rf, Pray rf.

Tilton A. C.—Vemer lf, Cyr 2b, Atchinson 3b, Smith c, Edwards p, Scheyler ss, Knudson 1b, Bertstall cf, Stevenson rf.

NEW FIRE APPARATUS.

At a meeting held on Tuesday evening of the committee appointed at the special town meeting to carry into effect the vote in regard to new fire apparatus it was Voted—that it be the sense of the committee that we endeavor to standardize the purchasing of Fire apparatus and that if a proper dial can be made on those lines that we contract to purchase two pumping machines and one combination all to be of full equipments and to be best of their respective makers.

Addison B. Stoddard Dead.

Addison Bates Stoddard, aged 69 years, passed away last Saturday at his home on Union street South Weymouth after a short illness. He was a native of this place, a son of William Stoddard. He was a shoemaker by trade. He was a veteran of the Civil war and a member of Post 58, G. A. R. He is survived by his widow and several children.

Funeral services were held Tuesday from his home, 418 Union street. The services were conducted by Rev. W. W. Rose, pastor of the Universalist church in South Weymouth. A delegation from Reynolds Post 58 G. A. R. attended Burial was in the Union street cemetery.

Practical Suggestion.

A man rather untidy in his personal habits was discussing the question of a new waistcoat with a friend. "What color would you advise?" he asked the friend. "Why," said the friend, "I'd get one of soup color."

FOURTH OF JULY OUTCLASSED.

Italian Colony of East Weymouth Celebrates In Honor of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary Last Saturday.

An event of much interest in the town each summer is the celebration held by the members of the Italian colony of the town in honor of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The program each year is most complete in every way and the celebration held last Saturday all day and evening, is recorded as one of the most successful ever held in this town.

The day's events opened at 8.30 o'clock when a parade, led by Chief of Police Butler and officer A. H. Pratt marched through the principal streets of the town. The police were followed by the Avellino band of twenty five peices, Guissipee Avellino conductor and a number of the Italian residents of the village. The parade started on Broad street near Central square and wound up at the Italian colony on Lake street about 9.45.

Open house was in order at all the Italian residences and many guests from other towns were present to join in the celebrating.

At ten o'clock a well attended band concert was given at Lake street. At noon time dinner was served and at three o'clock the band gave a fine concert in Jackson square.

In the evening, Jackson square was again crowded, at the third concert given by the ever willing band.

After the band concert fireworks were in order at "The Mountain" on Commercial street near Putman. Nearly five thousand people witnessed the display of fireworks, and all were unanimous in declaring that a finer display has never before been given in this town.

Magnificent set peices of every description, rockets and bombs drew a round of applause from the large gathering, who fully appreciated the elegant display.

After the fireworks the band returned to Boston and the great day was but a matter of history.

The days events were in charge of Guisseppe DelGrosso, Alfonso Grande, Aniello Russo, Guisseppe Petruzzi and Domiano Scoppettuolo, and the above committee is to be heartily congratulated on the huge success of the entire day.

McKee—Enwright.

Miss Annie J. Enwright, daughter of Mrs. Mary Enwright and Harry McKee of Hingham were married Monday evening at the church of the Sacred Heart in the presence of a large number of the friends of the couple. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. John B. Holland. The bride's cousin, Miss Helen Lonergan, was bridesmaid and the groom's brother John McKee, best man. The bride was attired in a costume of white satin with duchess lace trimming and veil. She carried a boquet of white sweet peas. The bridesmaid's dress was white embroidered batistte. She carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas. A reception followed at the home of the brides mother on Webb street. Guests attended from Boston, Brockton, Quincy, Rockland, Bridgewater, Hingham, and other places. Mr. and Mrs. McKee were assisted in receiving by the bridesmaid, best man and mothers of bride and groom. The ushers were, Daniel Sullivan of Quincy, John Moran of Boston, Richard McKee of Hingham and William C. Lonergan of East Braintree. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. McKee left for Canada where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return will reside in Hingham.

Shaw—Carter.

At the parsonage of the East Weymouth Congregational church last Saturday night, Miss Eva Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Carter of Commercial street, East Weymouth, and Mr. Oscar W. Shaw, also of East Weymouth, were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. Edward Torrey Ford, pastor of the Congregational church.

The best man was Harry Warner, and the matron of honor was Mrs. Harry Warner.

A reception followed the ceremony, at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr and Mrs. Shaw will reside at 747 Broad street, East Weymouth. Mr. Shaw is connected with the line department of the Weymouth Light and Power Co.

Cloverfields badly infested so that the soil is well stocked with doder seeds ought to be plowed up and planted with some crop like wheat, potatoes or corn, on which the dodder cannot thrive.

If you are thinking of putting in an orchard and don't know how to do, it hire a good man to do it for you. A good orchard is both profitable and pleasurable, but a lot of scrub fruit trees are worse than useless.

If you are not situated so that you can let your hogs out draw a load of earth and throw it into the pens now and then. The hogs will work it over and take a lot of comfort doing it. Makes them grow faster too.

Horses that are working hard will not do as well when turned out to pasture at night as when kept in and fed regularly on dry feed. They are not as apt to rest as well in the pasture as in a good barn, and the green feed they get at night may result in digestive disturbances.

The Hamburgs and Spanish are not so popular now as they were several years ago. Probably because they are very small and lay small eggs. The Leghorns are small, also, but as a rule their eggs are of average size. They possess a number of other good qualities not found in other fowls of their class.

If you have no alfalfa on your farm, sow some within the next two months; if you now have a small area, increase the acreage. Don't let anything prevent you from having some of this wonderfully recuperative, marvelously productive forage whose feeding value, ton for ton, is practically that of wheat bran.—Illinois Farmers' Institute.

Millions of acres of brush land that today are loafing could be brought into profitable use if the landowners would but keep flocks of goats as land cleaners. The winter care of goats is similiar to that of sheep. An open shed facing the south, provided with plenty of bedding and perfectly dry, will provide ample protection, while oats, roots and hay will supply sustenance.

Farming is attracting the attention of men as it never has in all ages of the past. Because of its bigness, its possibilities, its need, men are taking up the scientific study of farming in our agricultural colleges with more earnestness than they do law, medicine or engineering.

For a good pasture in autumn, rye should be sown this month. It should then be grazed closely, for if allowed to grow rank, the head may form, destroying its power to crop out in the spring. Another, and probably a more important reason for grazing closely, is to prevent the tendency to rust when it becomes of rank growth.

The life of an apple orchard is good for more than a lifetime. It does not reach its prime until it is about 60 years old which means that the future as well as the present of the orchard must be looked after. This is done by the mulching system. This keeps the life elements in the soil all the time, does away with a great deal of drought, and makes it possible for trees to bear annually.

Angoras are first aids to farmers who desire to inexpensively subdue wild land. Twenty-five or thirty goats pastured on 100 acres of bush land will effect wonders in a couple of years toward reclaiming the idle land. It is best to rotate the goats from one small field to another so that the animals are constantly gaining in live weight and at the same time killing out the undesirable growth.

Do not fall into the all too common habit of thinking that after a chick is past the first three weeks, it will raise itself. If a chick is to develop into a healthy, vigorous cockerel, or a strong, active pullet that will shell out the eggs next winter, it must have the best of feed and care throughout the entire growing period.

Calves should have milk until they are five or six months old for best results. If they are forced to subsist on coarse feeds and grain too young they will be stunted, as their digestive system is not developed enough to handle such food exclusively at an early age.

The manure belongs to the land. When the soil gives the grain, the corn and the hay crops to sell or feed and take the profits, it gives all that one is entitled to. The manure crop, the second crop, is not the farmer's to waste or sell; it belongs to the land from whence it came. It is the balance due to the land. It is the means which nature provided for maintaining the fertility of the soil. It is the farmer's duty to conserve every ton of manure produced from other sources.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all the other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses of from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

EARLY VISITING CARDS.

Those Used In Italy Were Elaborate Works of Art.

Some authorities hold that the origin of the visiting card lay in the circumstance that when Pericles first laid siege to the heart of Aspasia he sent her a bouquet to which, fearful lest she might not guess from whom the compliment proceeded, he caused to be attached a strip of wood wherein his name was cut.

According to Bertarelli, who, among others, has been at much pains to compile the history of the card, it is difficult to say whether it was first used in Greece or in China. However that may be, it seems to be an ascertained fact that the visiting card did not really obtain to any extent in Europe until the time of Louis XIV. It crossed the Pyrenees with Philip of Anjou when he was installed in the palace at Madrid, and Louis himself was the cause of its being introduced into the Netherlands.

Then it was adopted in Italy, where it was subjected to much elaboration. First, the cards showed a modest border of flowers or leaves; then appeared landscapes, bits of architecture, allegories, etc. Finally came scenes of rural life, alternating with views of monuments and towns. The name was printed on the picture of a wall, a tree or a fountain.

A view of the Adriatic figured on the card of Count Alexandre Papoli, while the Franco family favored a large stone guarded by two dogs, with the amphitheater of Verona in the background.—Baltimore News.

ITS PRODUCT TOO GOOD.

A Wonderful Oil Well That Was Found In the Balkans.

In Mr. Caton Woodville's "Random Recollections" is the story of a rich oil well that was discovered in the Balkans.

On one of his journeys he was shown a deep hole, sunk most probably by the ancient inhabitants of the country for mining purposes, but which he was assured was a petroleum well. Afterward Mr. Woodville heard the full story of this well.

A petroleum "find" was reported from the district, and an expert from Baku, in the Caucasus, the great petroleum district, was sent to the Balkans by a syndicate to inquire into this valuable discovery. He was taken by eager natives to this hole, and a bucket was dropped down at the end of a long rope and drawn up again, brimful of oil.

The expert examined the contents of the bucket, tasted it carefully, and then, turning to the assembled natives, he exclaimed: "This is the most wonderful oil well in the world. The petroleum is already refined."

The explanation was, of course, that some enterprising person, not knowing that petroleum comes from the oil wells in a crude state, had carefully placed some ordinary commercial petroleum in the well in the hope that the expert would think there really was an oil well there and offer a big price for the property.

WORLD FAMOUS FISH MARKET

In these days of high prices, when the cost of living is steadily soaring and the necessities of life are ever harder to obtain, even by those in comfortable circumstances, to say nothing of the hard-working common people, it is distinctly encouraging to note within the commonwealth of Massachusetts and especially within the limits of Greater Boston, the presence of a world-renowned center for the distribution of food, staple, wholesome, fresh, and in the greatest abundance as it is taken direct from the mighty reservoirs of the deep by those who go down to the sea in ships.

Fish has ever been the food of the multitude, and never before since the day when the loaves and fishes were multiplied by a Master hand and the multitude fed to repletion without cost and out of Christian charity, has there been such an almost miraculous production of this great popular food, fresh fish, nor has there been such wide and quick and cheap distribution into the very homes of the millions as goes on daily from the world's greatest fish mart, the up-to-date, sanitary and world-famous new Boston Fish Pier, equipped by the State of Massachusetts and the fish dealers at a cost of $3,000,000 to serve the people.

Figures are dry and uninteresting, but it is not hard to understand those furnished by the statisticians at the Fish Pier, who show that during the last year (1913) they handled over 150,000,000 pounds (75,000 tons) of fresh fish. This is more than 43 pounds for each inhabitant of Massachusetts and nearly 240 pounds annually for each man, woman and child in Boston, or three pounds daily for every family of five.

Because of the excellent facilities for handling this tremendous product which is daily increasing in volume, while prices are kept within reasonable bounds, the indications are that more than 200,000,000 pounds of fresh fish will be brought to and distributed from the Fish Pier during the present year.

The industry has always been one to which the state and the city could point with pride even when it was centered at "T" wharf, but its phenomenal growth and modern sanitary requirements forced it into new modern and more commodious quarters where all the facilities for receiving, storing and despatching the fish could be provided in accordance with the increasing popular demands.

The interest of the state of Massachusetts in the fact that her fishing grounds are the most prolific in the world; her capital the second largest fish market and rapidly becoming the first fishing port of the world.

Accordingly the new Fish Pier was erected at almost fabulous cost, and equipped exclusively for this most important business. It covers an area of 537,100 square feet, three sides of this great rectangular structure being covered by clean, deep tide water from the bay which effectually eliminates the noxious odors inseparable from the shallower water of the inner harbor and the lack of up-to-date sanitary equipment.

On this pier there are no less than 45 stores located in two long buildings and an administration building, which are great piles of brick, cement, glazed tile and stone, thoroughly hygienic and fireproof.

There is also a cold storage plant with a storage capacity of 18,000,000 pounds and producing 200 tons of pure refrigerated ice daily.

Every one of these 45 stores is a revelation in the art of receiving, handling, preserving and distributing fresh fish in the most healthful and expeditious way. There are all the required dressing rooms for the employees, shower baths, sterilizing apparatus, etc.

Those who have sought to make a meat a luxury and have succeeded in boosting it beyond the ordinary purse, have reckoned without the Boston Fish Pier's competition and its increased capacity for serving the people, quickly, cheaply and healthfully.

If marketmen removed from the waterfront do not understand it, they should be brought to see the tremendous advantage of this new mart for handling a popular food supply at a most nominal price and in greater quantity and variety than ever before, because, owing to the doubled space and more sanitary equipment there can be no doubt whatever that the people of the city and state can be better and more cheaply served than ever before.

Codfish and Cream.

Pick up and soak without boiling a pint of salt fish for each four persons to be served. Scald one quart of milk in double boiler, ith butter size of small egg, and when at boiling point add one rounding tablespoonful flour carefully blended in cold milk. If an egg can be spared beat it well and add it with the flour to the hot milk. Drain fish and stir into the cream. Add salt if necessary. Have ready two hard-boiled eggs and a tablespoonful of parsley. Pour codfish and cream onto a large platter. Around the edge place strips or rings of the hard boiled whites. Grate the yolks over the whole. Sprinkle with paprika and chopped parsley and serve with mealy baked potatoes.

BOARDING AND SHINGLE EXTERIOR.

Design 652, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN. SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

A very complete little cottage home at a modest price. The floor plans show an arrangement of rooms throughout this cottage complete in every detail. Four rooms in first story. The room at side of living room makes an excellent bedroom, den or music room. Three chambers in second story. Size, 26 feet wide and 28 feet deep over the main part. Full basement. First story, 9 feet; second story, 8 feet. Red gum, Washington fir or red oak throughout first story, pine to paint in second story. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $2,125.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will furnish a copy of Saxton's new 1914 book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains 310 designs costing from $1,000 to $6,000; also a book of interiors, $1.50 per copy.

A Dog Story.

We brought from Scotland a collie about six months old. He was allowed to be with us at the breakfast table, but never to be fed in the dining room. This rule was enforced by my daughter. I was the only member of the family who ever broke over the rule. And often when I offered him a tempting bone he would glance across the table, and if he caught the forbidding eye he would resist the temptation. But one morning she left the table abruptly. Rab followed her into the hall and watched her till she had closed the door of her study. Then he scampered back, nudged my elbow, as if to say, "Now is our time," seized the bone and was soon crunching it with the greatest satisfaction.—London Spectator.

Red Sea Heat.

At certain seasons of the year the Red sea is almost unbearable. The water taken from seventy to eighty feet below the surface at 6 o'clock in the morning will often register a temperature as high as 90 degrees. If, in addition, a sandstorm thinks fit to blow the whole air is full of a mist of innumerable particles of fine, hot sand, which blind and suffocate at the same time.

Striking at the Cause.

Mr. Littlerest—Doctor, what did you tell me was your special treatment for sleeplessness? Medico—We strike at the cause or the origin of the trouble. Mr. Littlerest—You don't say so! Well, you will find the baby in the other room. Only don't strike at him too hard.—New York Globe.

Squaring It.

Mr. Shoddy—Yes, that's the armah used by my ancestah who came ovah with the Conquerah. Young Lady—(after examining the armor carefully)—It says "Made in Germany" on the gauntlet. Mr. Shoddy—Oh, yes; my ancestah—er—started from there, don't yer know.—London Telegraph.

Contemptible.

Grace—If it was a secret why in the world did you tell that girl? Gwendolyn—It won't do her any good, my dear. I'd already telephoned it to all the girls she knew.—Puck.

Human Nature.

Eddie—Pa, what's human nature? Pa—That's the thing that always catches it when a fellow can't blame it on anybody else.—London Mail.

There are more men ennobled by study than by nature.

Guilt.

Commit a crime, and the earth is made of glass.—Emerson.

First Feminist Party.

The earliest deputation of women to parliament was organized close on 2,000 years ago. Under the triumvirate of Augustus, Antony and Lepidus it was proposed to tax the property of 1,400 wealthy Roman matrons in order to meet part of the expenses of the civil war then raging. They refused to submit to this imposition and sent Hortensia, one of their number, to plead against it before the senate. In the course of her speech she asked, "Why should we be compelled to pay for a war into which we had no wish to embark or for the support of a government whose policy we have no means of controlling?" This argument proved so effective that the tax on women was reduced to one-third of the amount originally proposed.—London Tatler.

Lakes of Massachusetts.

Like other glacier roughened areas, Massachusetts, though not specially distinguished as a lake region, is liberally supplied with inland bodies of water. A recent survey showed 1,115 lakes and ponds exceeding ten acres in extent, the total area covered being nearly 100,000 acres. The largest is Assawompsett pond of 2,121 acres. In Lakeville, and the one having the longest name is Chaubunagungamaug of 1,188 acres in Webster. Only one is in Nantucket county, while Worcester county has 298.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Star Dust.

A constant rain of meteor, star and comet dust is pouring upon this world of ours. But you should not jump to the conclusion that the earth is perceptibly "growing" on account of the influx of dust from without. It does grow a very little in that way, but it has been calculated that it would take a thousand million years to accumulate a layer one inch thick.—New York Journal.

Reverse Side.

"Have you managed to get a new cook yet?"

"Not quite."

"What do you mean by that?"

"The last one we applied to wants references from the cook who just left us."—Baltimore American.

Giving Details.

Maud—Kitty married a man a good deal older than she, so I hear. Marie—Older! Why, he's twice her real age and three times the age she says she is.—Boston Transcript.

"I Am No Failure."

My field may be stony or swampy, my plow may be poor, my strength small, the weather bad; but if heartily as unto the Lord I do the best I can and look not back, but keep right on, I am no failure.—Maltbie D. Babcock

A SLEEK, SLICK MAN

By M. QUAD

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

On the passenger list of the Ocean Queen as she sailed from Melbourne for London on the 16th of August, 1881, was the name of James Melvill, an Englishman, and if there ever was a sleeker, slicker man got into port I have not read of him.

No one seemed to know Jimmy, as he asked us to call him, beyond knowing that he lived up the country on a big horse farm and was worth half a million dollars.

When we came to shake ourselves down aboard I noticed that there was a lot of rather tough looking men among the steerage passengers. It was explained that they were going to the Cape to work on a new railroad. As near as I could size them up they were all colonials and men more used to horses than picks and shovels. I think the sleek Jimmy must have caught me watching the steerage passengers, for he took occasion one day to observe:

"There seems to be a fine lot of men going out to the Cape with us."

"As far as bone and muscle go," I replied.

Then he extended his cigar case, proposed a game of euchre and the subject was dropped. I don't claim that I was suspicious of Jimmy or that I was disturbed by the gang in the steerage. On the contrary, I was perfectly easy in my mind in all respects. I had in the Australian papers read that the Ocean Queen was carrying home more than a million dollars in gold. In fact, I had seen most of the boxes brought and taken down to the strong room. All other passengers must have been aware of the treasure, but there was little or no talk about it.

It is a wide expanse of ocean between the Cape and Australia, and at the end of a week we had all settled down into grooves and fallen into a monotonous routine. Early one morning a sail was sighted dead ahead, and almost as soon as she had been made out it was seen that she had a distress flag flying. We ran down to within a half mile of her before our engines were stopped. Only three men were visible on her deck, and she hadn't a boat in sight. The trio beckoned and motioned that we should send a boat, and the captain gave orders that one should be lowered.

The boat had pulled half the distance to the brig when we had something nearer home to attract attention. The sleek, slick little Jimmy suddenly held a cocked revolver to the captain's ear and marched him into his stateroom. Fourteen of the men from the steerage, each armed with a pistol and knife, suddenly appeared among us, and it wasn't three minutes before the whole crowd of us were in the cabin and a guard over us. The engine room was taken possession of at the same time, and the Ocean Queen had been taken without a shot being fired. The brig was lying broadside to us. She had two boats down on the far side, with fifteen men in each boat, and as soon as they had pulled around and captured our yawl one boat load of the rascals came aboard the Queen and the steamer was worked down alongside the brig. The sea was smooth, and the fellows could lash the craft together without fear of disaster.

We had been taken completely by surprise and had no show. They had the gold out and transferred within an hour. It is to the credit of the rascally gang to say that they were under good control and insulted no one. After the gold was disposed of they robbed the ship of a lot of bedding and provisions, and at the last the sleek, slick man came down into the cabin to say a few words.

"My dear friends," he said, "I do not wish to search you one by one, like a footpad or a bushranger, but I will trust to your honesty to hand over your money and jewels. I have figured on about the amount I should get. If I get it no one will be further disturbed. If I don't get it there will be room aboard the brig for most of the ladies."

I gave half my possessions, and I presume the other passengers retained a share as well, but the money, watches, rings, brooches, etc., laid on the table before the pirate had a good round value and seemed to satisfy him. He swept everything into a sack, bade us a fond adieu and within ten minutes was sailing away in the brig. The engines were disabled before they left and the crew of the mate's boat was sent back to us, and as no one had been killed, we were fain to think we had come off fairly well. We lay rolling in midocean for four days before the engineer had made repairs, and by that time the brig was several hundred miles away. Even had we known her course and position it would have availed nothing. We made a slow run for the remainder of the voyage, and it was three weeks before a man-of-war started out to look for the pirate craft. It had been a job put up in Australia, and it had worked to perfection. It may be that the brig divided the swag, but as she had a dozen different places to choose from, she had no fear of capture. So far as I had been able to learn she was never heard from, though the search was kept up for a year or more. There was enough plunder to set each one up handsomely, and I have always thought of Jimmy, the slick one, as touring about in the finest raiment, drinking the rarest wines and making himself a favorite wherever he stopped for a week.

The Marshfield Fair, the greatest South Shore event of the season, will open at the Agricultural grounds in Marshfield next Wednesday morning and continue through Thursday and Friday with a fine display and new program of attractions every day.

King Pluvius assumed sway at the advent of the present moon and has continued to the last quarter when another valve was opened until we have reached high water mark with flooded streets and some slight damage but thus far escaped the serious damage which has visited many places. Tomorrow we look for a new moon and some fine crop growing as a result of the rain.

Mrs. Julia Cleary.

Mrs. Julia Cleary, wife of Maurice Cleary who had been missing from her home 21 Keith street since morning was found dead late Monday night at the foot of a flight of stairs at the home of her son Maurice L. Cleary, from a fractured skull. Mrs. Cleary left her home in the morning intending to visit her daughter in Quincy. When she failed to appear home late in the afternoon the police were notified and officer Baker was detailed to make an investigation and after exhausting all clews officer Johnson of tha Braintree force and officer Baker went to her sons house and found the body. Medical examiner Jones of Quincy made an investigation and said it was evident that Mrs. Cleary had lost her footing and fallen. It is supposed that she opened the cellar door in mistake for a door leading into another room. Her son's wife was in the yard in the rear of the house and did not know of her presence. Mrs. Cleary was born in Abington 59 years ago and was a daughter of the late Patrick Sullivan. She resided in East Braintree up to the time of her marriage. Besides her husband she leaves three daughters Mrs. Warren Hersey of Newark N. J., Mrs. Mary A. Costello of Quincy and Miss Nellie Cleary of this place, also three sons Maurice L., Dennis and Thomas Cleary.

The funeral took place from the church of the Sacred Heart yesterday morning and was attended by many of the friends of the deceased. Rev. Fr. J. B. Holland celebrated mass. There were many beautiful floral tributes. Interment was at St. Francis Xavier cemetery.

Weymouth A. C. 10. Rockland A. A. 1.

At the Weymouth Fair grounds Saturday afternoon the Weymouth A. C. defeated the Rockland A. A. of Rockland 10 to 1.

Barron for Weymouth pitched a fine game allowing only four hits and had them well scattered, he also struck out four and passed six. While Baker for the visitors was hit hard, allowing twelve hits and his support at times was poor. A triple play by the visitiors was the feature. The summary:

Weymouth A. C.—Howe ss, Richardson 2b, Griffin c, Loud 3b, Davis cf, Belcher rf, Baker 1b, Callahan lf, Barron p.

LOVELL'S CORNER

—Charles Smith spent Sunday with his brother, James Smith of this place.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaw and Mr. and Mrs Eugene Hutchinson are stopping at David's island, North Weymouth.

—Mr. and Mrs. Burleigh French are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter last Friday.

—Master George Roberts has been spending part of his vacation with relatives in Lowell.

—A birthday party was given by Mrs. Frank Sherman, Saturday afternoon to friends from Cambridge and Boston. Lunch was served under the trees with golden rod and wild flowers for decoration.

—The V. C's. were the loosers in a well played contest with the Braintree White Sox, Saturday afternoon at French's Common, by the close score of 3 to 0. The batteries were Keefe and Cook for the White Sox.

—The popular place to hold a field day seems to be at Lovell's Corner. Saturday, theOdd Fellows of East Weymouth held their annual field day at Lovell's field. Next Saturday the Loyal Order of Moose will hold a picnic on the same grounds.

—Miss Hester Hawes of Dorcherter has been staying with relatives here for sometime.

—Mrs. Mary Chapman and Miss Mabel Chapman of Roslindale, spent the week end with Mrs. Albert Chapman.

—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Roberts are the parents of a boy born Thursday evening.

Baseball Notes.

Weymouth A. C. and C. M. A. were in the winning column last Saturday, but the Porter A. A. got shut out by the White Sox of Braintree. At that, 3 to 0 isn't very bad.

One of the most consistant and best players in town this season is Fred Drinkwater of the Clapp Memorial nine. This boy can play any where on the field. Last Saturday he gave the best exhibition of third base playing seen on the field this season, and at the bat he is always on the job with a hit when needed. His triple in the eighth inning last Saturday sewed the game up for the East Weymouth nine.

Dan Howley's Montreal team is in a decided slump. Dropping doubleheaders has been their specialty for the last two weeks. However, with the aggregation of "has beens" and never will be players that Dan had willed to him when he took charge, he has certainly made them play grand ball, even if they arn't leading the league.

What is the matter with the baseball fans of this town? A mere handful at the Clapp Memorial game last Saturday and not an extra large gathering at the Weymouth A. C. games in South Weymouth. Both the Clapp boys and the Weymouth A. C. aggregation are playing fine ball and deserve better patronage. Wake up fans, attend the games, rouse some enthusiasum and lets have a few games like the old Dewey and Norfolk days!

Lawn Party at Glen View.

A very pretty lawn party was given the early part of the week at "Glen View," Westwood grove, in honor of Miss Marie Pretat, who has been speding two pleasant weeks at the lake. Mrs. Emily Musgrave acted as hostess. The grove was prettily decorated with Japanese lanterns and the lights from nearly 100 candles illuminated the place like daylight. Many games were held and the following is a list of the winners:

Candle race, Lulu Tisdale and Charles Tirrell; egg on spoon, Marie Pretat and Lester Tisdale; Jockey race, Susie Pratt and Warren Leonard; cracker and water, Elsa Wruck and Charles Tisdale; three legged race, Robert Martin and Warren Leonard.

Dancing on the pine needle floor was indulged in until a late hour.

Among the many guests present were Mrs. Mabel Tisdale, Mrs. Caroline Tirrell, Mrs. Alma R. Madden, Dr. Harold Musgrave, William Musgrave, Susie Pratt, Katherine Pratt, Elsa Wruck, Lulu Tisdale, Lillian Musgrave, Mrs. Charles Smith, Master Harold Smith, Gladys and Doris Musgrave, Robert Martin, Charles Tirrell and Charles Tisdale. Refreshments were served during the dancing by the young ladies.

Paint Better.

Better isn't enough; paint best

A man bought "cheap" paint; saved 20 cents or 30 or 40 or 50 cents a gallon, didn't he?

Yes, and bought 40 or 50 or 60 or 80 percent more gallons; how much did he make on his paint?

And he paid for painting those gallons—a fair day's work is a gallon—how much did he make on the labor part of his job?

He lost a quarter or third of his money.

How long will it last? Not his money, the paint?

Perhaps half as long as Devoe. How long will his money last, if he buys other stuff as he bought that paint?

Better buy the best paint; it makes the least bill and least-often.

DEVOE.

Every Gas Light In This City
should consist of a first-quality incandescent mantle, brilliant and durable, and a modern, efficient burner. To use gas in the old-fashioned, open-flame way is expensive and unsatisfactory.

It is no part of modern gas company service to encourage you to burn twice as much gas as you need, and get a third as much light as you ought to have.

We have many different kinds of modern gas lamps for every possible lighting need, in the home and the business world. They can be as beautiful as you wish, with varied glassware and fixtures. They are thoroughly convenient, with their modern appliances for lighting and extinguishing. And every one is a joy, in the beautiful and adequate light it gives; and the way it saves money.

"Reflex" Inverted and Welsbach Upright Lights represent the best in modern gas lighting. Let us show them to you.

We recommend the mantles bearing this trademark—the Welsbach Shield of Quality—as the most satisfactory for good light and long service.

ENDORSED AT HOME.

Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Weymouth Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experiences when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Weymouth, adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

Dennis Kiley, 19 Common street., says: "There is no question that Doan's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for kidney trouble. I have used them on several occasions when my kidneys were out of order and have found them beneficial. I hope that others suffering from kidney trouble will give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Kiley had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

More Appropriate.

Fond Father—"Is that young Mr. Sapphedde still down in the parlor with daughter?" Fond Mother—"Yes, but I just heard him singing, 'good-night, Beloved.'" Fond Father—"If he had any idea of the appropriateness of things he'd be warbling 'Good Morning, Carrie,' instead."—Kansas City Star.

Water-Proofing Shoes.

Take equal parts of beeswax and mutton tallow and melt them together. While hot, apply to the soles of the shoes and the crease where the soles and upper join, being careful to fill in all the seams. The uppers can be treated in the same manner and the shoes will be perfectly waterproofed.

M. E. HAWES, Auctioneer

Mortgagee's Sale

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Charles W. Dyer of Weymouth to William T. Shaw of Weymouth, dated November 21, 1907, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 1069, page 197, and for breach of the conditions thereof, there will be sold at public auction upon the premises, on Monday, September 14, 1914, at 11 o'clock, A. M., all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed and therein described as follows:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated in that part of said Weymouth known as North Weymouth, and bounded and described as follows, viz:

Beginning at a point on the northeasterly side line of Sea street, at land of Emily W. Trussell shown as parcel "D" on a plan hereinafter named or mentioned, and running in a northeasterly direction at a right angle with said line of sea street a distance of sixty-one (61) feet to an angle point; thence running northerly and all by said land of Trussell, a distance of ninety and two-hundreths (90 2 100) feet to land of Henry W. Dyer, said land being the easterly portion of parcel "C" shown on said plan; thence running easterly by said land of Dyer a distance of twenty-eight and fifty-one-hundredths (28 51-100) feet to land now or formerly of the estate of Edward E. Dyer; thence southwesterly by a straight line parallel with and twenty-eight and forty-two-hundredths (28 42-100) feet distant from the second described line, along said land of Dyer estate a distance of one hundred fifty-four and ninety-eight-hundredths (154 98-100) feet to said line of Sea street; thence northwesterly by said line of Sea street a distance of forty (40) feet to the point of beginning and containing four thousand seven hundred and one (4,701) square feet, more or less. Being a part of the premises conveyed to me by Henry W. Dyer et al. by deed dated June 13, 1906, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds.

The above described parcel is shown as parcel "E" on a plan of land in Weymouth, Mass., of the estate of Temperance B. Dyer, dated May 28, 1906, made by Russell H. Whiting, civil engineer, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, to which plan reference is hereby made.

A deposit of $100 cash or certified check will be required from the purchaser at the time and place of sale, said amount to be forfeited as damages, if through fault of the purchaser the sale is not consummated, balance of the purchase price to be paid upon passing papers within ten days of the date of sale, at the office of Littlefield & Tilden, 294 Washington street, Boston. The property will be sold subject to any unpaid taxes or other municipal liens.

Estelle Martindale's Plow

Story of a Duel That Did Not Come Off

By RUTH GRAHAM

It was somewhere between 1850 and 1855 that Adelbert Swift graduated from a northern university and, having heard a great deal about plantation life in the south, concluded to go there with a view to becoming a planter. He had inherited some means with which he might buy and stock a plantation; but, realizing his ignorance of the art of tilling the soil, he felt that it was prudent for him to gain some knowledge on the subject before making an investment.

In order to do this he conceived the idea of obtaining a position as tutor in the family of some planter. The hours he would be required to teach would not be many each day, and he would have time to familiarize himself with the workings of a plantation. He was not long in finding a position in the family of a Colonel Southgate in South Carolina. The Southgate plantation was a very large one, including some 800 negroes. Swift found he had not made a mistake in assuming that there was a great deal to learn in running a plantation. One of them was in itself a community consisting of two main branches, the planting branch and the business branch.

Swift, being young and not yet enervated by the climate, occupied a portion of the day riding about on the plantation observing the methods used and asking questions. He volunteered beside to handle the colonel's accounts, to which he devoted himself during the evenings.

The south has always been noted for the hospitality of its people, and Swift was made at home in the families of the planters in the vicinity of Colonel Southgate's manor house. Indeed, he received more invitations than he had time to accept, which was a source of trouble to him, fearing that when he declined one of them it would be set down as a slight.

Not far from the Southgate plantation resided Miss Estelle Martindale. Her father was supposed by many to be the owner of the plantation he managed. He had married its owner, who had died and left him with a little girl, Estelle. Martindale had contrived to get into debt to his wife for a considerable sum, and she had made a will leaving him an amount equal to his indebtedness, bequeathing the residue to their daughter.

Estelle was about Adelbert Swift's age. She had inherited from her mother not only the plantation, but a practical nature, and was principally occupied in checking an impractical father, whose chief idiosyncrasy was to sink money. She had learned as her mother had learned before her that to save her property from being wasted she must keep it and her finances in her own hands. In managing her father she was very adroit. Nothing hurt his pride so much as to have any one think that he was his daughter's employee. Consequently she always spoke of the plantation as his and consulted him about everything, though, matching her own good against his poor judgment, the consultation always ended in her views being carried out.

Swift, having been highly educated, made an impression upon Estelle Martindale. He found her particularly congenial, and she preferred him to any of the young men of her acquaintance.

When Albert Martindale noticed that an intimacy was springing up between Swift and his daughter he fancied he saw the end of his administration. He was not a bad man. Indeed, he was an honorable man, but it was impossible for him to contemplate with equanimity his daughter's marriage, since her husband must learn that his wife's father had no right in law to the plantation or its management. It is very easy for one to find reasons for preventing what is not to his interest and oftentimes to believe his reasons to be sound.

Martindale said nothing to his daughter about the prospect before him, but showed—he could not help showing—his antagonism to Swift. When they met, except at the Martindale home, he bowed to the young man coldly. In his home he would have scorned to treat any guest except, with an appearance at least, of cordiality. Estelle saw what was in her father's mind, though Swift did not.

What began between Swift and Miss Martindale with friendship developed into love. Swift called frequently at the Martindale home. Then came flowers, a sure sign that there were intentions. Martindale watched the process with disquietude.

Martindale, himself an ardent southerner, had a friend, a Major Marston, who was much prejudiced against the north. Marston, meeting his friend one day, spoke of Swift's attentions to Estelle and asked if Martindale were going to give his daughter to a northerner. This was the straw that broke the camel's back. Martindale made an evasive reply. But the die was cast. From that time he began to lay plans for breaking up the impending match.

He could not attack Swift on political grounds, for the young man had no political views. But Martindale must find some ground of objection to the man who, by marrying his daughter, would doubtless make an inroad upon his authority as manager of his plantation. It annoyed him that he could find no valid ground on which to base an opposition. Meeting his friend Marston again, he confessed the fact. There was nothing for Marston to do as his intimate friend but help him out. He covertly circulated a report that Swift was agent for a northern abolitionist society.

When this report came to Martindale's ears he forbade Swift his house, giving the report as a reason for doing so. Swift denied the charge. Hot words ensued, and before Swift realized what had happened he received a challenge to mortal combat from the man whose daughter he was engaged to marry.

He was wondering what in the world to do when Estelle's quadroon maid appeared and handed him a note from her mistress. It appointed a meeting between him and her at the house of a mutual friend. At the time named he went to the place designated and found Estelle waiting for him.

"You have heard what has happened?" he asked.

"I have."

"Is there no possible way out of it?"

"Either you must resign me and leave here or we must find some expedient to head father off."

"How can he be headed off?"

"First, you must not be placed in a cowardly position. He would kill me as well as you if I should marry one who showed the white feather. You must accept his challenge."

"What!"

"Be quiet. I have a plan for preventing the meeting or, at least, delaying it. And if it can be delayed long enough I may bring father to his senses."

"What are you going to do?"

"Perhaps it is better that you should not know. I may have to change my plan at the last moment. One thing you may be assured of—there will be no duel between you and my father. But he must not know that I am aware of his challenge. He would probably take measures to change the hour and place of meeting, and you would then be placed in a position to fight or be disgraced."

This ended the interview, Swift going to his own home. Estelle remained where she was till later that she might not be seen in his company.

The next morning the two principals and their seconds met in an opening in a wood not far from the Martindale plantation. The ground was being measured off when a horseman rode up and began to read something from a paper he held in his hand.

"Who are yo'," asked Martindale, "and what do yo' want?"

"I am the sheriff of this county, and I want either security or the money on your note of hand past due for $2,000. The holder of the note is not willing that you should risk your life without first satisfying his claim."

"Nonsense!" cried Martindale, looking at the sheriff as though he would like to shoot him as well as his daughter's lover. "Yo' get out o' the way, and don't yo' interfeah with a southern gentleman vindicating his honah."

"Yo' can't fight, majah, without satisfying the claim."

"Can any of yo' gentlemen," said Martindale to the seconds, "relieve me of this unpleasant situation by taking up my note and holding it till I have settled with this man who has insulted me?"

No one present seemed inclined to take the risk.

Martindale stood looking upon those about him with wonder. That a man who was about to defend his honor should be denied a favor like this was incomprehensible to him.

"Do you mean to tell me, gentlemen," he said, "that you deny me the means whereby I may proceed with this affair?"

His friends were spared the necessity of replying, for at the moment there came the clatter of hoofs and a man rode on to the ground in great haste.

"Major Martindale," he said, "are yo' about to engage in mo'tal combat, suh?"

"What is that to yo', suh?" was the reply.

"In that case I expect yo' befo' risking yo' life to satisfy a claim I have against yo' fo' three hundred and seventy-six dollahs and fo'ty-five cents."

"And yo', too, Walker!" exclaimed the major reproachfully. "Has it come to pass in the south that a man cannot protect his household without first settling every trifling amount of indebtedness he has outstanding? Has a man's honah become of less impo'tance than filthy lucre?"

"Yo' have my sympathy, majah. I have no desire to prevent this meeting. Give me security and I shall make no opposition to its proceeding."

Martindale looked crushed. Glancing from one to another of his friends, he cried despairingly:

"Will no one help me out of this degrading position?"

"I will, father." The words were spoken in a woman's voice from behind a tree, and Estelle appeared leading a horse on which she had been riding. All looked at her astonished.

"My dear little girl," said the father, "I knew you would be sensitive to yo' father's honah."

"I will take up these notes on condition that you shake hands with Mr Swift and consent to my marriage with him. He is about to buy the Venable plantation, and I shall go there with him, leaving you to take care of your interests here as you always have done."

Estelle put her arms around her father's neck and did not release him till he had given Swift his hand and consented to the marriage.

It was she who had informed his creditors of the risk he was about to take.

BULL PLOWS OF PERU

Primitive Methods and Implements Still Used in Farming.

The tilling of the soil is done in the crudest way not only in Peru, but throughout the whole of South America. Outside of the wheat fields of the Argentine, the methods would not do credit to the Egyptians in the days of Rameses. In fact, the bull plow as it is used in Peru today dates back to the kings of the first dynasty of Egypt.

The plow, the Peruvian spade and the grub hoe, which latter is simply a crooked stick with an iron shoe, are the three implements of agriculture in Peru today. No implement is found to crush the hard lumps of ground in the plowed fields. This is done by the women and children with a short club like a ball bat. Corn is planted by using a sharp stick to make a hole in the ground. Then the kernel is dropped in the hole and covered by a push of the bare foot on the softened earth.

Rain is not a necessity in these valleys. The natives have made admirable irrigating ditches that convey an abundance of water to every portion of the cultivated fields. The water moistens the roots of the corn from day to day, or turned into the ditches that follow the cane fields it becomes a potent factor in the luxuriant growth of the sugar cane. The best sugar cane in the world is grown in Peru, but 90 per cent of it is used, I am told, to make rum.—National Magazine.

LUCERNE'S QUAINT BRIDGE.

In Its Center Is an Old Time Prison and Torture Chamber.

Lucerne, in Switzerland, possesses what is probably the most curious bridge in the world as well as one of the greatest historic interest. This bridge, known as the Kapellbrucke, or "Chapel bridge," crosses the River Reuss at its junction with Lake Lucerne. It was constructed so long ago as 1333 and for nearly 600 years has formed the chief avenue of traffic across the broad but sluggish stream. In other days the bridge extended its zigzag shape to nearly twice its present length and reached as far as the hofkirche, or cathedral, whence its name.

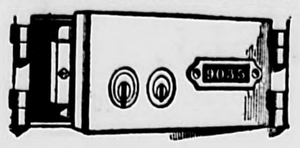

In the center of this covered wooden bridge stands the famous octagonal "wasserthurm," or water tower, where in olden times the municipal treasure was stored. For ages it was also used as a prison, and among its dungeons is a torture chamber. But the most unique feature of all consists of the series of curious pictures in the roof of the bridge. There are sixty-nine of these painted on triangular wooden panels fitted into the pitched roof of the bridge. One after another they tell the salient facts of Swiss history or portray events in the life of the saints of the town, St. Leodegar and St. Maurice.—Washington Star.

Better Toll Rates

New telephone toll regulations provide that unless you talk to the person asked for there will be NO CHARGE FOR THE TOLL CALL.

Formerly a reduced rate was charged when the number called was reached even though the person asked for was absent or not ready to talk.

Why not make a call now to some one who would like to hear from you to-day? No talk—no charge.

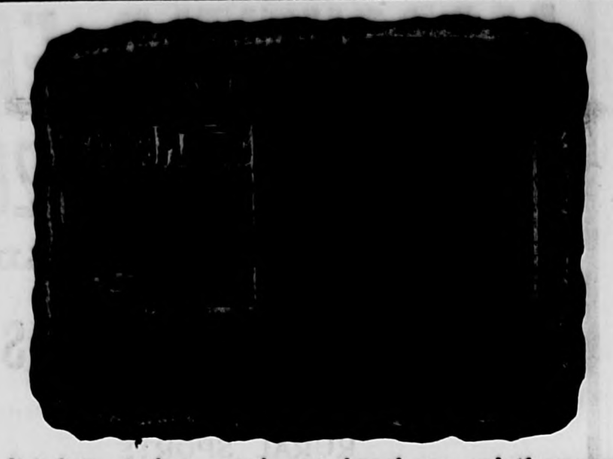

Wouldn't it be worth the price?

If you don't know the rate, ask the Toll Operator. No charge for a call for rates. If you want the Toll Operator to report to you the actual cost of a completed call, please notify her when you give the order for the call.

A toll call is more satisfactory than a letter or a telegram, and in some instances is more economical, because you get the message and the answer for one price.

Footprints in Stone.

From time to time amateur geologists unhampered by "book learning" make as they suppose wonderful discoveries in the primeval rocks. They find what they hail not as footprints on the sands of time, but footprints of men and animals on flat rock surfaces and slabs of stone. The real origin of such hollows is now known to be the former presence of concretions which have in time been worn out. In every part of the earth such "footprints" have been found. The most remarkable of these is a print two feet long on the top of a lofty hill called Adam's peak in the island of Ceylon, which is believed by the natives to be the stamp of the foot of Buddha as he left the earth and sprang into heaven, and it is accordingly an object of worship.—London Globe.

It looks as though the South Weymouth lacrosse club was a little unjustly treated by the Sunday papers. The Globe credited them with no games at all in the League series, and the Herald went out of its way to chaff them on their light calibre, etc., neither paper giving an account of the game of the day before. The fact is, they did win a game on its merits and are entitled to the credit of it.

The most severe storm for many years for the summer season visited this locality on Monday. The wind blew a gale from the northeast, beginning early in the morning and was accompanied by a heavy downfall of rain and some hail. Constantly increasing in violence the wind at 2 o'clock was almost a hurricane. Much damage was done to yachts and boats and to crops and orchards. Fruit was blown from apple, pear and peach trees, corn was laid flat, and branches of trees were torn off.

A MARKET IN SPAIN.

With a Bargain in Cheese Plus the Price of the Compliments.

At early morning the market place of Medina is a rare sight, says C. Bogue Luffmann in his "Quiet Days in Spain." It is thronged with hundreds of tilted carts and pack animals, loaded with all the materials that the population requires. So universal is the practice of buying in the market square that there are very few shops, and those are both small and old fashioned.

At a stall in the market place a bright eyed dapper little woman was offering tiny cheeses of goat's milk. A countryman examined one carefully, tucked it in his pocket and put down a real. I thought the cheese a bargain and said to the little woman, "I'll have one," and gave her a peseta, which is four reals. She beamed and gave back two reals. I remarked, "The price of the cheese is one real."

"Ah," said she, with a winning smile, "but you are a caballero." (A nobleman.)

I enjoyed her audacity so much that I had to laugh and say, "You are a little rogue;" and she, seeing that she had beaten me, curtsied and laughed as she cried, "Ah, great senor mine, you are many times a caballero!"

I do not complain. Such incidents and compliments are cheap at the price.

ROYAL DOUBLES.

Understudies Who Played the Role of Monarch in Public.

In a land of distrust like Russia it is only natural that the precautions taken should be of the most drastic order; hence the use of a royal understudy who has always been a conspicuous figure at that court. Indeed, it was the understudy of the late Czar Alexander III.—a man named Komaroff—who was murdered in Moscow some years ago, when the murderer thought he had covered himself with glory by assassinating the czar.

Nicholas, like his father before him, has an understudy, and the many state functions he attended at the opening of his reign, when the relations with his people were less strained than they are today, were attended for the most part by proxy.

No monarch, however, made such frequent use of his understudy as the late Emperor William of Germany. Every day as the clock struck 12 the emperor came out and bowed on the palace balcony. It was not until some time after the emperor's demise that the secret was made known that the man who appeared daily on the balcony was the royal understudy. And the person who gave the secret away was the great Bismarck.—London Black and White.

Trinidad's Asphalt Lake.

The proverb about the folly of building on sand might be written to include the vicinity of the Trinidad asphalt lake. This remarkable body of pitch is perhaps the nearest thing to the "goose which laid the golden egg" that has ever been found, for it has the obliging faculty of replacing during the night the asphalt which has been dug from its surface during the day.

That the replenishment "comes from somewhere" was graphically illustrated a short time ago when a house located near the edge of the lake began settling on one side, not to stop until the digging of pitch in that vicinity ceased.

The pitch is dug laboriously from the lake by negroes, using pick and shovel, and is carried on an overhead tramway directly to the waiting ships.—Wide World Magazine.

As a Clown Sees Us.

"It is lots of fun to watch the big crowds that throng the circus or any huge amusement place," says a famous clown. "Just as soon as they get within the doors they all grow younger except the children, and they become just a wee bit older. Highbrows call it the psychology of the happy crowd, but we clowns say it's the 'old uns getting gay.'

"A great big crowd, no matter how old or dignified they may be in everyday life, are just about nine years when they smell the sawdust in the ring. My, it's fun to watch them! Many a time we clowns laugh in real happiness just because the 'old uns' make us laugh with their happiness."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Business Instinct.

The business man noticed that the friend he was talking to continually examined his watch.

"Don't let me keep you," he said, "if you have an appointment."

"Oh, no," said the other. "I sent the wife to London this morning on a visit and took the precaution of insuring her at the booking office for £500. I am just thinking that I shall know in another twenty-five minutes if I have £500 or a wife."—Manchester Guardian.

Progress.

"My daughter is having her voice cultivated."

"Is it improving?"

"It's growing stronger. She used to be heard only two apartments away. Now we get complaints from the next building."—Washington Star.

Mrs. Elizabeth Denbroeder at Rest.

Funeral services of Mrs. Elizabeth, widow of the late Adrian Denbroeder, whose death we mentioned last week, took place at the Congregational church, last Sunday afternoon and were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Edward T. Ford.

The pastor paid a beautiful tribute to the departed, who for 36 years had been a member of the church, drawing his inspiration from the following lines:

"God's arching sky above whether we live or whether we die."

A quartet composed of Mrs. Edith Cary Page, Miss Ethel F. Raymond, Mrs. Harry Bates and Miss Susie E. Raymond sang "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me," "Still With Thee" and "Perfect Peace."

Mrs. Denbroeder was also an active member of Reynolds W. R. C. No. 102 and that organization attended in large numbers, performing its ritual at the church, Mrs. Agnes Baldwin president, Mrs. Eliza Ferris chaplain, Mrs. Annie Jordan S.V., Mrs. Ida Keene J.V. and four color bearers, officiating.

The burial was at Fairmount cemetery and the bearers were four grandsons.

Mr. and Mrs. Denbroeder were natives of Holland and came to this country in 1855 bringing with them the one child which had come to their home. In 1902 they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary and a short time after Mr. Denbroeder passed on. Nine children were added to the one they brought with them and of the ten, seven are now living, viz: William P., M. Louis and Charles R. of East Weymouth; Jacob B., South Weymouth; Annie M., wife of Cesco Hart, Bridgewater and Elizabeth A. wife of F. Raymond, Brockton.

Minimum Wage.

The object of a "minimum wage" law is the prevention of low wages. The law, like the "Fair Wage" regulation, would decide the lowest (minimum) wage it would be legal to pay upon public works. It could not apply to private contracts, of course.

Trouble of Man.

Man born of woman is of few days and full of trouble. He spends the best years of his life working up to a limousined car and three servants. Two servants are inefficient and the third goes by riding and wrecks the car.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

RAILROAD HEARING.

Lively Discussion on Double Tracking Washington Street.

One of the most spirited discussions yet held in regard to Street Railway franchises was that held at the office of the Selectmen, Tuesday evening on the petition of the Bay State Street Railway for a franchise to double track Washington street, from Washington to Lincoln squares and also a short section on both Washington and Broad streets east of Lincoln square.

Chairman of the Board of Selectmen opened the hearing with Division Superintendent and other railway officials and a goodly number of interested citizens in attendance.

Mr. Conway was the first speaker and explained to the board their reasons for asking for the franchise, which reasons were the improvement of their track system in order to facilitate travel and avoid the delays in making the time required to connect with steam car service at Braintree.

R. B. Worster, with a well signed petition from citizens of the Landing, spoke in favor of the franchise with the provision that the construction should be a first class nature and all features of properly safeguarded by the Selectmen.

Dr. G. D. Bullock raised the point that Mr. Worster's petition was not signed by abuttors on Washington street.

Fred S. Sampson of the Board of Trade transportation committee and also a special representative of the Planning board of the town spoke strongly in favor of the franchise as an absolute necessity to the many people using the street car line.

Charles Sheehy spoke in behalf of the many young men employed in Boston but living in Weymouth, remote from steam cars but on the line of street cars connecting with Braintree, said young men often missing trains by the continued delay of street cars at Washington and Lincoln squares.

John W. Cronin argued the necessity of something being done in order that there might be less loss of time in getting to and from Braintree by both the South and East Weymouth lines and if double tracking would do it that was the proper thing to do.

Michael Sheehy, an early agitator of the proposed change, thought the traveling public should have some relief from the constant delay and the double track would obviate the trouble.

George F. Curtis, an abuttor and remonstrant, thought that the railroad company should first demonstrate its ability to take care of the track already constructed as that now in use was a bad piece of road; the company already had two tracks, one in use and another buried under it.

Dr. G. D. Bullock also spoke as an abuttor in remonstrance as the road was not wide enough to carry two tracks and give room on either side for travel or convenience to the people living along the line and as tax payers they were entitled to some consideration.

Dr. Franklin P. Virgin, another abuttor, was strongly opposed to the movement. He gave a very fine word picture of the earlier days of the street as one of the most beautiful in town but now despoiled of its fine trees, grade uncertain and dangerous and no especial benefit to be derived by the change.

Wallace Bickuell spoke of the necessity of a better system of grading especially at Lincoln square where a short time ago the sidewalk was 9 inches above the street and has now been reduced to 3 inches and a little farther down the hill the side walk is two feet or more higher on one side of the street than it is on the other.

Charles J. Hollis spoke of the difficulty in the way of taking more room for the car service and at the same time maintain a road which would stand the heavy teaming, to which it is constantly subjected.

Mr. Conway was the last speaker and said that while he and his company had been accused of many evils which they had not committed they were anxious to remedy any evils which existed.

At a late hour the meeting adjourned and the question of further franchise is up to the Selectmen.

PRESENTATION AND DEDICATION.

Kings Daughter's Present Drink of "Water In His Name" at Jackson Square.

A good sized gathering of King's Daughters and their friends of the town gathered in Jackson square East Weymouth last Tuesday afternoon to witness the dedication exercises of the fine new bubbler drinking fountain presented to the Town by the King's Daughter Union of Weymouth.

—Rev. W. M. Newton, pastor of the East Weymouth M. E. Church opened the exercises with a few well selected remarks. Mrs. Robert S. Hoffman, president of the King's Daughters Union of the Town then presented the fountain to the Town, Mrs. Arthur Cuningham, secretary of the Union, reading the official presentation document. Selectmen Henry Hanley accepted the gift in behalf of the Town and very fittingly thanked the King's Daughters for the beautiful gift. Following this a box containing the names of the several members of the different circles in the Union together with several other facts, was installed under the fountain. Mrs. Robert S. Hoffman then partook of the sparkling waters of the new fountain, and a much needed article was safely installed in Weymouth's busiest square.

The new fountain is made of Quincy granite, with one bubbler at the top, and a fountain at the base for dogs, cats and birds. It stands about four feet and a half high and at the top is about fifteen inches across. It bears the following inscription: Presented by the King's Daughters of Weymouth to the Town. It is situated on the western side of the green in the middle of the square and is in a most convenient spot. It is safe to say that the new fountain will be a source of much benefit to both strangers and the towns people who pass through Jackson square, especially during the warm weather.

Town Business.

In the absence of John A. Raymond, town clerk, who is on a two weeks' vacation, C. B. Cushing was elected town clerk, pro-tem, an act which became necessary to legalize a note for $10,000 which the board issued for a loan, at 5½ per cent.

Much of the time of the Monday's business was devoted to the so-called poor or relief department.

The selectmen, on request, reviewed the hearing held in Boston on August 14th in regard to deepening the Fore River channel to 24 feet and approved of the action.

The much discussed question of unused poles, still standing, and for whose removal there seems to be a difference of opinion came up again and all parties, telephone, electric light, gas, street railway and fire alarm are invited to meet the Board next Monday and focus the matter.

SCHOOLS.

As we say elsewhere in this issue school will open on Tuesday the 8th; not on the 1st or the 15th as some are reporting, but on the 8th, in all the buildings now in use and in addition, owing to the large increase and crowded condition in East Weymouth, the long closed Franklin building will have two rooms opened in it with scholars to be taken from the lower grades of the Washington and Jefferson schools and a fifth grade will be established in the Washington school.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The committee chosen to carry out the vote of the special town meeting in regard to new fire apparatus are constantly on the job examining and testing different machines, qualities and prices.

This week they have visited the Knox Motor Co. works at Springfield and that company came to Weymouth on Tuesday with a machine for demonstration. On Monday the Maxin Co. came to Weymouth with a piece of apparatus for which they claim great merit.

Tuesday night agents of the LaFrance and Robinson Companies met the committee for discussion of their various products and the committee adjourned to Tuesday evening, Sept. 1st, when it is possible that some definite action will be taken.

Armored Vessel of 1530.

Armored vessels of war had an earlier origin than is generally supposed. The Knights of St. John of Jerusalem built in 1530 a war galley, the Santa Anna, which was protected with a cuirass of lead, to its great advantage in sea fights. The Santa Anna had another modern feature; a contemporary chronicler narrates with pleased astonishment that the vessel carried a bakery, which permitted the crew to enjoy the luxury of fresh bread.

AUTO CRASHES THROUGH BRIDGE

One Killed in Accident at North Weymouth Last Saturday Night.

An eight year old girl was killed and six other persons, including a year old baby, were rescued, when a big touring car in which they were riding crashed through the rail of the Hingham bridge in North Weymouth last Saturday night, and then plunged 25 feet into the waters of Weymouth Back river.

In the automobile was Harry S. Snyder of Nazing street Dorchester, with his wife, three children and two friends. Leona Snyder, aged 8, the eldest child, was pinioned under the machine and it was stated on the recovery of her body on Monday that the child was killed when the automobile turned over, the first supposition being that the girl was drowned.

It is said that the accident was caused by derangement of the steering gear and blow out of one of the tires at the same time, As the big car shot forward toward the rail uncontrolled, the occupants of the machine were thrown in every direction. Half a dozen men in row boats and motor launches, as well as many cottagers in the section, witnessed the accident and hastened to the rescue of the unfortunates.

The rapid current carried them under the bridge and but for the timely aid of several of the residents with long ropes, Mr. and Mrs. Snyder would have drowned.

In the machine with Mr. and Mrs. Synder were Leona, who was killed, Elsie, 6 years old and baby Jeannette, one year old, and also Miss Ida Leivenson, a cousin of Mrs. Snyder, who lives in Bay City, Mich., and Harry Brody of Glen Falls, N. Y. The rescued were taken to the Quincy hospital.

While Captain Joseph Dolan of the Boston Fire department and his two sons and half a dozen other cottagers threw ropes and lines of hose out. H. J. Hancock and his daughter Hazel put out in a motor boat and picked up Mrs. Snyder, who was making a frantic effort to pick up her daughter, who was bobbing up and down in the water. Hazel Hancock reached out and picked the baby out of the water and Mr. Hancock succeeded in getting hold of Mrs. Snyder's shoulders.

Fred Harper of Boston, who is summering at North Weymouth, saved Harry Brody in a rowboat, the latter holding on to the piling of the bridge until rescued.

Henry Lynch and Barney Flynn with several others in boats assisted in bringing Miss Leivenson and the other two children ashore.

The body of Leona Snyder was recovered Sunday in Weymouth Back river by Harry Warner anr W. E. Hawkenworth of East Weymouth. The body was discovered, caught on a mooring line of a boat, nearly two miles fro the place of the accident.

The Snyder family and their two guests had spent the day at Nantasket and were returning to their homes when the accident occurred.

Fire at Pond Plain.

Last Friday evening a fire broke out on Thicket street, caused by the upsetting of a can of paint remover. A neighbor seeing the explosion immediately rang in the fire alarm at box 56. The boys from the Pond Plain Independent Chemical company immediately responded and soon had the fire under control, confining it to two rooms. The fire while it lasted, was intense, having melted a silver service that stood on a table, the new piano was completely ruined, as well as the furniture. Even the steel ceiling in the dining room was badly warped.

By the time the Ward 5 fire department arrived the fire was out and the boys deserve considerable praise for their quick work as the building would have been completely gutted if they had been obliged to wait for the fire department, in fact there was no possibility of getting water, as the nearest hydrant was some 800 to 1000 ft. away.

Mrs. A. Rose Hunt, Dead.

On Thursday, August 27, 1914, Mrs. A. Rose Hunt, widow of the late John E. Hunt, passed away at her home, 99 Front street, Weymouth. Mrs. Hunt was born at South Weymouth, Jan. 8, 1844 and was the daughter of late George W. and Hannah White. She was educated in the public schools of this town and served as postmistress at Weymouth for quite a few years. On Jan. 6, 1868 she was married to John E. Hunt, son of the late Charles E. and Marcia E. P. Hunt. Two sons, John P. Hunt of Weymouth and Edwin W. Hunt of Whitman, a sister, Miss Sarah A. White and brother, George L. White survive her. Funeral at her late home Sunday at 2 p. m.

PLANNING FOR SCHOOL.

Dresses That School Misses Will Need For Classroom Wear In the Fall.

For the girl who is making her first appearance at college or for the boarding school miss a modish but simple tailored suit is an important item of the wardrobe. She is not likely to be prominent in the social activities of the college or school set until she has an established circle of acquaintances, and her everyday dresses and the best suit will have much to do in placing her in the estimation of her associates. With these first opinions are likely to be based very much on appearances.

BLUE SERGE GOWN.

Serge is always a safe choice for the tailored suit. The quality should be as fine as circumstances will permit, but the garment should be up to date in every line, for no one is more critical than the girl of this age. Blue is a safe color to choose. Anything freakish in cut or line should be avoided.

The gown pictured here is of blue serge, with short coat finished below with wide belt with a plaited peplum effect. The skirt has a short double tunic and a loose box plait on the front. The gown is short enough to show neat buttoned boots. The little fabric hat is shaped to shade the face.

WEDGWOOD WARE.

Queen Mary of England's Partiality to It Makes It Again Fashionable.

The English queen is an admirer and collector of old Wedgwood pottery, and at Windsor castle there is a room entirely devoted to this famous ware, some of the finest and rarest examples being displayed.

Wedgwood pottery, the older examples of which are so much sought after, is named after the most famous potter England has ever produced—Josiah Wedgwood, who died in 1795. He produced from designs by Flaxman, the sculptor, white cameo reliefs on a delicate blue ground known and envied by collectors all over the world as Wedgwood ware.

This ware is now very costly and practically beyond the means of the ordinary collector.

NEAT TEA COZY.

The Chinese Basket Which Is Conveniently Fitted and Wadded.

The most practical of all tea cozies is the Chinese tea basket, which comes fitted with teapot and two Chinese serving cups. This basket is wadded and lined in characteristic Chinese style and has a strong hasp and metal handle on the cover. It will keep the tea hot for an hour. These baskets come in three sizes of from two to five cups capacity. They are ideal for out of door teas and the automobile. Most attractive are the embroidered linen and the silk cozies which slip over the pot.

PANTRY POINTERS.

If milk is heated until lukewarm, then chilled suddenly, there will be much more cream.

Scale fish with a nice, clean curry-comb that has never been used for anything else.

Microbes are apt to lurk about the mouth of the milk bottle. It should be carefully wiped off before the milk is poured out.

Toughness of angel cake is often due to the fact that the eggs are not beaten properly. They should be beaten so stiff that they will stand alone.

Cut off the rinds and soak rashers of bacon in cold milk for an hour. Take them out, dredge well with flour and fry in fat. This is an improvement on the ordinary method of frying bacon.

Law at Ascot.

Ascot is legal as well as royal in being the only racecourse in the world with its especial court of justice. When George IV. was regent he was assaulted at Ascot and when his assailant was arrested demanded his instant punishment. Enraged at the delay necessitated by the man's conveyance to Windsor, the prince decreed that a magistrate should always be in attendance at Ascot for the swift punishment of offenders. The indictable offenses act of 1818 made the royal wish the law of the land, and during Ascot week the chief magistrate at Bow street is accordingly on duty in the little room opening onto the paddock, to try and to sentence all offenders within a minute or two of their arrest.—London Answers.

Not Allowed to Read the Bible.

But few people know that in the sixteenth century an Englishman was not allowed to read the Bible, yet it is perfectly true. Henry VIII. issued a decree prohibiting the common people from reading the Bible. Officers of state were exempt from this law. Probably the king thought these officials would be none the worse for perusing the sacred work, and noble ladies or gentlewomen might read the proscribed volume if they did so in their gardens or orchards, but no one was allowed even to read it to the lower classes.—Westminster Gazette.

To Lambaste.

"Lambaste" is a sinewy, heroic word. We prefer it to its variant "lambust." And it is a word of respectable age. "Stand off awhile and see how I'll lambaste him" was written in 1637. It comes from the word "lam," to beat soundly, and "baste," which means the same thing. The tautology is here only intensive. But the word should always be spelled with a final "e."—London Standard.

Food of the Ruby Crowned Kinglet.

The ruby crowned kinglet is very small and seemingly insignificant, but this bird attacks and helps to hold in check such insidious foes of horticulture as treehoppers, leafhoppers and jumping plant lice and feeds considerably on the seeds of poison ivy.

CURIOUS FOSSIL FORESTS.

Twelve Tower, One Above the Other, in Yellowstone Park.

In the Yellowstone National park twelve successive forests, one on top of another, have been buried by outflows of lava and petrified, according to a government pamphlet entitled, "Fossil Forests of the Yellowstone National Park," by F. H. Knowlton.

The area within which the fossil forests are now found was apparently in the beginning an irregular but relatively flat basin, on the floor of which, after a time, there grew the first forest. Then there came from some of the volcanoes, probably those to the north, an outpouring of ashes, mud flows and other material which entirely buried the forest, but so gradually that the trees were simply submerged by the incoming material, few of them being prostrated. On the raised floor of the basin, after a time, the next forest came into existence, only to be in turn engulfed as the first had been, and so on through the period represented by the 2,000 feet or more of similar beds.

The whole history of the manner in which these forests were fossilized is not fully understood, but it was undoubtedly dependent on or at least greatly facilitated by the presence of volcanic and hydrothermal activity, which was doubtless then, as it is to some extent now, a marked feature of the park region. The fossil forests are surrounded by a matrix that is known as an acidic lava, which contains abundant silica in solution. The first part of the process of silicification may well have been that silica would be deposited in all the cells and vessels of the wood, making an accurate cast of all open spaces. Then, while the slow process of decay went on, as each particle of organic matter was removed its place was taken by the silica, until finally all the wood substance had disappeared and its place, atom by atom, had been taken by silica.

SAVE THE SOIL.

Don't Let the Rains Wash the Valuable Plant Food Away.

If you knew that it takes nature 10,000 years to form a foot of soil maybe you would have a higher opinion of Mother Earth and be more careful how you drain your garden or field.

If you saw a granary full of rat holes you would suspect a careless farmer. But a field left to wash away by the unchecked rush of surface water after a downpour is fully as wasteful. The only difference is that here the waste is of plant food before it gets into the grain.

If your garden or field is on a slope, terrace it; if on a level, plant it not in straight rows, but in circles. And in both cases tile drain it, for the stuff that washes away is precisely the stuff that your crops most need. Once gone it is expensive to replace.

When you stop to think that everything depends on the soil, clearly the soil is worth saving.—Seattle Star.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

Promptly gather up and burn all brush and rubbish in the orchard.

Celery delights in a low, rich, heavy-moist soil and is usually grown upon the same land year after year.

Remember that the wood ashes are the best kind of fertilizer for the orchard, lawn or garden.

As a matter of fact, it may be stated that all successful farmers are and of necessity must be "scientific agriculturists."

What is the best waterproof white, wash? Why good oil thickened with white lead. No lime mixture on the outside is going to last long in wet weather, and why not stop fooling ourselves?

There is a chicken law in Indiana, according to State Attorney Jeffries, which claims that when chickens wander away from their owner's premises and take to tearing up the neighbor's garden they become wild birds, and the aforesaid neighbor may shoot them.

Colts and steers, if carefully handled daily, will need no breaking of heads or limbs in order to make them work for you. Accustom them to the harness and yoke for weeks before you want their services, and when they understand what you want, they will do all they can cheerfully.

Nothing can be gained any longer by quitting the farm. It stands for everything that is attractive, wholesome and profitable; but at the same time it stands for the new and the stimulating. Country life cannot be made dull, unless it willfully severs itself from advantages that are freely offered.

Good dairy practice demands that the milk flow be maintained at a high level all the time from parturition to drying off. It becomes necessary therefore to supply some feed to take the place of the grass. The easiest way to do this is by means of silage. Silage is cheaper and decidedly more convenient to use than soiling crops.

All good farmers and horsemen know that the law of inheritance is as true and strongly established with horses as with humans and other animals. The foal must inherit all of its qualities from its dam and sire and from their ancestors. This true of shape, size, general build, action and mental qualities, under the last of which disposition is included.

Many horses are made or spoiled while following their dams as foals. The foal is not apt to be spoiled if the owner or a single good man works its mother regularly, but if the mare during the period her foal is following her is worked by several different men, the foal is very apt to be in bad human company at least a part of the time. Bad company is as bad for colts as it is for boys and girls.

The importance of succulent foods has previously been mentioned. Root crops form one of the ideal succulent foods. Root crops are especially valuable to the poultryman because they give a relatively big yield from a small area they admit of easy storing during the winter, they are easy to seed and are relished by the bird.

Usually nothing is done to corn after the last regular cultivation, or after it is "laid by," as many term it. In some cases no cultivation is necessary after the regular last cultivation, but in other cases the crop can be helped out wonderfully by going between rows with a one-horse implement of some kind, especially during a dry summer. Dragging between rows with an old mowing machine wheel or any implement that will break the crust and form a dust mulch to hold soil moisture is good for the corn plants up to and after the roasting-ear stage.

Both old and young horses have good memories, remembering good treatment and responding accordingly, and likewise remembering and resenting bad treatment. Not all horses, however, are of a combative nature, and will not become vicious even with long-continued abuse, but their disposition will be spoiled in some way. Some horses will kick at the offender and try to escape. The mature horse that never was mistreated as a colt will not be suspicious of your actions while feeding, grooming, harnessing or working him. If he has never been mistreated, he naturally assumes that he never will be, or that all your movements in his presence are not harmful, but friendly.

No Fruit Without Bees.

If there were no bees, fruit trees and other plants could not produce any fruit. Apple, plum, cucumber, clover, alsike, alfalfa are fertilized by bees. Honey is the bait with which the bee is induced to perform this task. The colored, fragrant petals of the blossom are the advertising signboard telling the bee where the honey may be found. If the blossom is to set fruit the bee with its fuzzy body must brush some of the yellow dust called pollen from the male organs or anthers at the bottom of the blossom, deposit this pollen on the female organ called the stigma. The blossoms are so arranged that to get at the honey the bee must first brush, with its pollen covered body against the stigma, thus completing the pollination. As soon as it has performed this duty it may draw a check for the work in the form of the blossom. While drawing this pay the bee is involuntarily covered with pollen again and made ready to proceed to the next blossom and repeat the process.—Francis Jaeger.

Legend of the Peacock's Feathers.

The ill fortune said to fall upon the owners of peacocks and the wearers of peacock feathers is accounted for by an oriental legend.

The story runs after this fashion: When God created the peacock the seven deadly sins were stirred with bitter jealousy and complained loudly that the bird should be more beautiful than they.

"You are quite right," the Creator answered. "I have been unjust, for I have already given you too much. You should be as black as the night that conceals you." Whereupon he plucked out the green eye of jealousy, the yellow eye of envy and the red eye of murder and added them to the bird's feathers. So the blind sins are ever pursuing the bird to regain their eyes, and that is the reason that when men or women adorn themselves with the feathers misfortune dogs their footsteps.

Eyeglass Lenses.

All lenses used in making eyeglasses by manufacturers in this country are formed from imported glass, which is secured principally from Germany. This glass is of texture and transparency so far above the products of American glass plants that the optical companies use it exclusively for their high grade work. Each blank is about two inches square and nearly one-eighth inch in thickness. In appearance it is not unlike an ordinary piece of plate glass—the edges are rough from the molds, and it has no magnifying properties. This is the work of the optical manufacturer, and it is for him to grind the glass and form it until it magnifies or refracts the object before it.—Columbus Dispatch.

Cut and Run.

"Cut and run" originated in a peculiar custom of the Egyptian embalmers. A low caste was employed to make the first incision in the corpse, a process viewed with much dislike by the people, who held him accursed who should mutilate the dead. As soon as the fellow had made his "cut" he had to run through a storm of curses, stones and sticks. He "cut" for a living and had to "run" for his life.

Starting a Row.

"Johnny doesn't get that weak chin of his from my side of the house!" she exclaimed.

"No, my dear," meekly responded her husband. "Johnny has my chin, but he inherits his mother's tireless capacity for keeping it in motion."

Old Open Work Clocks.

A peculiar clock of the time of Charles I. was the lantern or bird cage style, which hung from the walls high up with its works exposed.

An Important Analysis

By EUNICE BLAKE

We hear a great deal about happy brides going to the altar. I have long been a happy wife and the mother of children, but in my case, so far as my feelings were concerned the word should be halter instead of altar. Sensitive women are liable to collapse on the eve of their marriage. And why not? Every one knows that marriage is a lottery. But to say that one will either draw a prize or a blank is absurd. One doesn't draw a blank in the lottery of marriage; it is either a prize or Tartarus.

I confess that as a girl I was emotional, and I have now eradicated emotion from my nature. I had several offers of marriage and chose John as the most desirable of the lot. I felt every confidence in him. My only trouble was that I didn't seem to feel any different the day after I became engaged to him than the day before. There was a lot of emotion during the middle day of the three, but somehow on the third it seemed to have vanished.

I was frightened. What had I done? Engaged myself to a man whom I did not love? How could I have felt all that lovingness—I use the word for want of a better—I experienced the day John proposed to me and I accepted him? From the heavens I had sunk to a bottomless pit. I would have given the world to undo what I had done. Why not undo it? Because there was a sort of subconsciousness in me that I was making a ninny of myself. How could I, who had responded to my lover's words and caresses one day, tell him the next that I had made a prodigious mistake? Besides what assurance had I, should I make this confession, that I would not be as much cast down a day later because I had broken the engagement?

I had the good sense to keep away from John for a couple of days, at the end of which time I recovered from my reaction and wondered at it. Indeed, when I met my fiance again I was back in that emotional condition commonly called love. Love! In four letters are described that which is the foundation of the world. And yet when we speak of it between young persons who are about to mate I think it would better be called emotional insanity. This is not real love, though I admit it may be the beginning of real love.

I soon recovered my equanimity and sailed on smoothly for the four months of my engagement. I was occupied preparing my trousseau, and that kept me from asking myself every few minutes whether or no I was really in love. I think if John had paid a bit of attention to another girl I should have known quite definitely whether I loved him or not. But he was not that kind of a fellow at all. He was perfectly satisfied with me, and I concealed from him the fact that I was constantly fighting doubts whether I loved him well enough to marry him.

I remained in this condition of mental hesitancy till a few days before the day appointed for the wedding; then I had a terrible breakdown. I analyzed my feelings thoroughly, and the analysis was very unsatisfactory. There is nothing so incapable of analysis as love unless it be a poem. But I made what I considered a number of analyses, and every one proved more conclusively than the preceding that I was about to marry a man for whom I had only friendship.

I resisted the temptation to tell him so till I could withstand it no longer, then sent for him. He saw the moment he looked at me that there was something the matter.

"What is it, sweetheart?" he asked anxiously.

There was something in the word sweetheart that threw me back on myself as an engine reversed. But I felt that what was troubling me must come out.

"I am very miserable."

"That's singular. I'm very happy."

"I am afraid I don't love you well enough to marry you."

He took my avowal in a very unloverlike manner. He should have ground his teeth and tore his hair. He did nothing of the kind.

"A sort of stage fright?"

"No; I have long been in doubt. And today I have analyzed my feelings and"—

"In what laboratory did you do it?"

"In the laboratory of introspection."

"Did you put your love into a test tube?"

"I suppose that would express it figuratively."

"Well, if it didn't turn out to be love what did it turn out to be?"

"I don't know."

"It doesn't matter to us since it isn't love. I'll countermand the orders given in preparation for the wedding. The cards are out. We can't recall them."

"That's the most terrible thing about it."

"Terrible! There's nothing terrible in that. We were not going to be married to please these persons. If at the last moment we find we're going to make a mistake we must withdraw of course."

"Of course."

"I'll go at once to countermand the orders."

He turned to go. I called to him. "Haven't you forgotten something?"

He turned and saw me looking at him wistfully.

"Oh, a kiss!"

He came back, took me in his arms and kissed me. I didn't release him.

Mortgagee's Sale

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage given by Charles W. Dyer of Weymouth to William T. Shaw of Weymouth, dated November 21, 1907, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 1069, page 197, and for breach of the conditions thereof, there will be sold at public auction upon the premises, on Monday, September 14, 1914, at 11 o'clock, A. M., all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed and therein described as follows:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated in that part of said Weymouth known as North Weymouth, and bounded and described as follows, viz:

Beginning at a point on the northeasterly side line of Sea street, at land of Emily W. Trussell shown as parcel "D" on a plan hereinafter named or mentioned, and running in a northeasterly direction at a right angle with said line of sea street a distance of sixty-one (61) feet to an angle point; thence running northerly and all by said land of Trussell, a distance of ninety and two-hundreths (90 2-100) feet to land of Henry W. Dyer, said land being the easterly portion of parcel "C" shown on said plan; thence running easterly by said land of Dyer a distance of twenty-eight and fifty-one-hundredths (28 51-100) feet to land now or formerly of the estate of Edward E. Dyer; thence southwesterly by a straight line parallel with and twenty-eight and forty-two-hundredths (28 42-100) feet distant from the second described line, along said land of Dyer estate a distance of one hundred fifty-four and ninety-eight-hundredths (154 98-100) feet to said line of Sea street; thence northwesterly by said line of Sea street a distance of forty (40) feet to the point of beginning and containing four thousand seven hundred and one (4,701) square feet, more or less. Being a part of the premises conveyed to me by Henry W. Dyer et al. by deed dated June 13, 1906, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds.

The above described parcel is shown as parcel "E" on a plan of land in Weymouth, Mass., of the estate of Temperance B. Dyer, dated May 28, 1906, made by Russell H. Whiting, civil engineer, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, to which plan reference is hereby made.

A deposit of $100 cash or certified check will be required from the purchaser at the time and place of sale, said amount to be forfeited as damages, if through fault of the purchaser the sale is not consummated, balance of the purchase price to be paid upon passing papers within ten days of the date of sale, at the office of Littlefield & Tilden, 294 Washington street, Boston. The property will be sold subject to any unpaid taxes or other municipal liens.

All communications must be accompanied with the name of the writer, and unpublished communications cannot be returned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.

Teachers and scholars in our public schools still have another full week as the schools do not open until Tuesday, the eighth day of September.

The long vacation is fast drawing to a close and the mountains, hills and valleys, green fields, rivers, lakes and ocean are sending back vacationists with brown arms and faces and in many cases needing a little rest before resuming work.

We have a National Flag and take off our hats and stand up when the "Star Spangled Banner" is sang. We have a State Flag and pray "God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts" when it is flung to the breeze, but Weymouth as a corporate body is older than the Nation or the State and while it has a seal indicating that fact it has no flag.

We claim a settlement in 1623 but as a corporate town we date Sept. 2, 1635 and next Wednesday we will be 279 years old. While we may not have a public celebration of our birthday let us all join in rejoicing that we still "live and have our being" in one the best towns on earth and resolve that we will try and keep it so.

Owing to the all absorbing foreign war, the advanced cost of living or some other reason there has been comparatively little political talk thus far in the campaign. A small number of nomination papers were quietly circulated, filed with the Town clerk and are now awaiting the result of the primaries, after which independent papers may be in the front by new aspirant for various state positions from Governor to Representatives in the legislative and speaking of the latter Dennis J. Slattery is now the Democratic nominee of the 7th Norfolk district. Kennith Nash the Republican and A. W. Hasting the Progressive.

The first semblance of public political rally or gathering of the campaign in town will take place at the Fair grounds to-morrow Saturday afternoon when the Republican Town committee will hold a sort of warming up open meeting.

The 14th Congressional field is now open to all comers, and they are not a few. To say nothing of other parties there are some 5 or 6 Republican aspirants for the position and three or more of them will speak at the meeting on Saturday-viz Guy A. Ham, Ex-Mayor Howard of Brockton, Frank F. Crane of Quincy and R. L. Raymond.

Suburban Life.

The subject of housebuilding receives thorough treatment in the September issue of "Suburban Life, The Countryside Magazine," which is called, very appropriately, "The Fall Housebuilding Number." Country houses of every description are illustrated and described at length and the prospective builder who cannot get a great deal of suggestive value out on the issue, must indeed be hard to please. Such subjects are plumbing, heating, electric wiring and the life are also treated authoritatively. Some of the leading articles on housebuilding subjects are; "Some Housebuilding Kinks," "The Unusual House of Unusual Folk," "A Country House of Stone and Stucc," "Utilizing the Space Behind the Bricks," "A Brick on Colonial Lines," "An Architect's House of Tile and Stucco," "A Little House for a Town Lot," "A Quaintly Designed Tea-House," "Selecting Plumbing That Will Last," "An Attractive Farm Barn on English Lines," "How to Really Heat Your House" and "Wiring for Electric Lighting." In addition, there are many timely articles having to do with country living and its many interests, such as "Have a Greenhouse of Your Own," "Who's Who Among Bulbs," "The Berkshire Country Club, Unique in its Achievements," "Making a Success of Tree Plant," "Help Record Flower Behavior," "Why They Like the Greenhouse," "Sanity in American Fashions," "Making a Fire-Box Hotbed" and "September in Southern Gardens."

The "King of Rome."

What became of Napoleon's son is a question often asked, as little mention is made in history of the young prince, the desire of his father's life, who was born March 20, 1811, amid great rejoicing in Paris and hailed as the "king of Rome." In January, 1814, Napoleon embraced his wife and child for the last time, and this really ended the reign of the little king "who never saw his kingdom." He was reared in the Austrian court under the name of the Duke of Reichstadt and grew to be a handsome young fellow and quite a brilliant scholar. He had one short year of military life and then contracted pulmonary disease, from which he died in his twenty-second year. He worshiped the memory of his father and always spent the anniversary of his death, July 22, in his own rooms. He is buried in the Carthusian monastery of Vienna, which is the Austrian Westminster abbey.

WEYMOUTH A. C. SHUTS OUT C. M. A.

Callahan Allows But Two Hits And Is Never In Danger of Losing. Condrick Pitches Well Also.

With Callahan holding the C. M. A. batters in the palm of his hand, the Weymouth A. C. of South Weymouth pinned a 3 to 0 shut out on the Clapp Memorial nine at the C. M. A. grounds East Weymouth last Saturday afternoon.

Lew Callahan's pitching was the main feature, but "Bunk" Loud's work was a strong second. This "vet" hammered out two of the four hits made off of Condrick and both hits scored runs. In the field Loud accepted seven chances without a mix up. For Clapp Reilly starred, while the whole Weymouth A. C. were in the battle from the start. The series between the two teams now stands at one game each, the C. M. A. boys defeating the W. A. C. at South Weymouth a few weeks ago.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS WELL?

Many Weymouth People Know the Importance of Healthy Kidneys.

The kidneys filter the blood.
They work night and day.
Well kidneys remove impurities.
Weak kidneys allow impurities to multiply.
No kidney ill should be neglected.
There is possible danger in delay.
If you have backache or urinary troubles.
If you are nervous, dizzy or worn out.
Begin treating your kineys at once;
Use a proven kidney remedy.
None endorsed like Doan's Kidney Pills.
Recommended by thousands.
Proved by Weymouth testimony.

Mrs. P. Clancy, 258 Washington street, Weymouth, says: "One of the family has to do a lot of heavy work and as the result suffered from pain in his back. When he came home at night after a hard day's work, he complained of his back being lame and stiff. In the morning he could hardly get out of bed. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended so highly for backache and other kidney troubles, that he decided to try them. A few doses rid him of backache. One box did him a wonderful amount of good."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Clancy recommends. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Mighty Capella.

The star Capella is a hundred times brighter and hotter than our sun. If the earth were as near to Capella as it is to the sun the thermometer (if an instrument could be made capable of bearing such a temperature) would rise in July not merely to a hundred, but to 10,000 degrees F.! The oceans would fly off in puffs of steam. The forests and fields would kindle and burn like matchwood. The mountains and hills would melt like beeswax in a redhot oven! The earth in the rays of Capella would be as a moth in a candle flame.—New York Journal.

Insulted.

Here is an amusing instance of histrionic conceit. An interviewer, having obtained access to the presence of a famous actor, asked the great man if he would be kind enough to describe some of his early failures.

"Sir," snapped the tragedian, "I never had any! James—the door!"

Where It Pinched.

"Don't it aggravate you that I ask you for twenty-five louis?"

"No, that does not aggravate me; it is the giving of it to you." — Paris Pages Folles.

All Labor Is Worthy.

There must be work done by the arms or none of us would live, and work done by the brains or the life would not be worth having.—Ruskin.

Reason For Haste.

"I'm going to marry her at once."

"What's your hurry?"

"My salary isn't large enough to stand an engagement."

Kangaroo Sinews.

The sinews of the kangaroo are especially desirable for use in surgery for sewing wounds and binding broken bones together.

COMMUNITY SERVICE UNION.

Proposal of Rev. Chester J. Underhill For New Organization.

Rev. Chester J. Underhill of the Baptist church is working along the lines of a new organization to be established for the purpose of diffusing knowledge along different lines, entertaining the patrons of the institution and general social and physical improvement.

A meeting will be held at the Baptist church this (Friday) evening for the purpose of organiziation and election of officers for the proposed different department which are set forth as speakers, finance, moving pictures, play grounds, music, house, printing, advertising with possibly other departments to be added.

We are told that it is in the plan to establish reading rooms, give entertainments and make a broader use of the church building than has been done in the past, not purely as a church movement but to get the men together to work for healthful entertainments and better use of leisure time.

Baseball Notes.

Weymouth A. C. 3, C. M. A. 0 Callahan was too much for the East Weymouth boys last Saturday.

"Bunk" Loud is the same live, aggressive player as when he starred with the Norfolks. His two hits won the game for the Weymouth A. C. boys and he fielded without a slip-up.

A rubber game between the Weymouth A. C. and the C. M. A. boys would be a decided attraction for one day of the Weymouth fair.

Gardner, the left fielder of the Weymouth A. C. nine is one of the classiest fielders seen on the C. M. A. grounds for sometime. Since he played with the High school nine he has improved very much, both in covering ground and judging flies in his territory.

The C. M. A. team is to play the Quincy A. A. at New Downer's Landing tomorrow afternoon.

Life.

By Jennie F. Stoddard, East Weymouth.

Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour? (Young)
Life's a short summer, man a flower. (Dr. Johnson)
By turns we catch the vital breath and die— (Pope)
The cradle and the tomb, alas, so nigh. (Prior)

To be is better far, than not to be, (Lewell)
Though all man's life may seem a tragedy. (Spencer)
But light cares speak, where mighty griefs are dumb, (Raleigh)
The bottom is but shallow whence they come. (Daniell)

Your fate is but the common fate of all, (Longfellow)
Unmingled joys here, to no man befall. (Southwell)
Nature to each, allots his proper sphere, (Congreve)
Fortune makes folly her peculiar care. (Churchill)

Custom does often reason overrule, (Rochester)
And throw a cruel sunshine on a fool. (Armstrong)
Live well; how long or short, permit to heaven; (Milton)
They who forgive most, shall be most forgiven. (Bailef)

Sin may be clasped so close, we cannot see its face, (Trench)
Vile actions, where virtue should rule in place. (Somerville)
Then keep temptation down, however dear, (Thompson)
Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear. (Byron)

All tempting snares let your conscience lay, (Smollet)
With craft and skill, to ruin and betray. (Crabbe)
Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise, (Massinger)
We, masters grow of all that we despise. (Cowley)

Then, renounce that impious self esteem, (Beattie)
Riches have wings, and grandeur is a dream. (Cowper)
Think not ambition wise because 't's brave, (Davenaut)
The paths of glory lead but to the grave. (Gray)

What is ambition?—'tis a glorious cheat, (Willis)
Only destruction to the brave and great. (Addison)
What's all the gaudy glitter of a crown? (Dryden)
The way to bliss, lies not on beds of down. (Quarler)

How long we live, not years but actions tell, (Watkins)
That man lives twice, who lives the first life well. (Herrick)
Make then, while yet we may, your God your friend, (Mason)
Whom Christians worship, yet not comprehend. (Hill)
The trust that's given guard, and to yourself be just, (Dana)
For, live we how we can, yet die we must. (Shakespeares)

Diamond Saws For Stone.

In the four fields of stone cutting—hard, soft, cast stone and terra cotta—new methods have wrought great changes of late. In the large cutting plants limestone is handled like so much wood and is cut by circular saws, smoothed by planes and bored into with much the same sort of tools as are used by woodworkers. By all means the most interesting machine used in this work is the diamond saw. The word "diamond" is not fancifully applied, for the device actually includes a huge circular saw set around the edge with real diamonds. They are not the clear, white stones that are used in jewelry, to be sure, but for all that they are real black diamonds, said to be worth about $5 a karat. These stones are about the size of dried peas and are set in pairs in interchangeable steel teeth. One of these saws will eat its way through limestone at the rate of twelve inches in a minute. At the end of a month the diamond teeth are taken out and sent away to be recut and reset. A new set of diamond teeth is then put in place at a cost of about $600.—Argonaut.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all the other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market, It is taken internally in doses of from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

If We Knew.

Could we but draw back the curtains
That surround each other's lives
See the naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we would find it better,
Purer than we judge we should;
We should love each other better
If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
See the good and bad within,
Often we should love the sinner,
All the while we loathe the sin,
Could we know the powers working
To o'erthrow integrity,
We should judge each other's errors
With more patient charity.

If we knew the cares and trials,
Knew the effort all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain,
Would the grim external roughness
Seem, I wonder, just the same?
Should we help, where now we hinder,
Should we pity where we blame?

Ah! We judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force;
Knowing not the fount of action
Is less turbid at its source.
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good;
Oh, we'd love each other better
If we only understood.

A Home In America

A Story For Labor Day

By MARGARET C. DEVEREAUX

Jean Stahren and Elsa Vogan lived on adjoining farms on the western coast of Norway. Neither had any brothers or sisters; consequently they were constant playmates, for there were no other children within a couple of miles. Since the country was rocky and not very productive their parents were very poor. But neither Jean nor Elsa had ever known luxuries, and what we do not know of we do not covet. Besides, there is an unconsciousness of deprivation in childhood, and so long as children have enough to eat, though of the plainest food, and enough clothing to keep them warm they are content.

But there came a time with Jean when he began to think of his future. This was when he was seventeen years old. One day, standing with Elsa on a high ridge overlooking the Atlantic ocean, he said to her:

"Elsa, it will not satisfy me to remain here with father and mother to work this little farm. There is barely enough for them to be made out of it, and I feel that I must go out into the world to make something for myself."

A frightened look came to Elsa's face. This was the first intimation she had that she and Jean would not live near each other always as they had lived.

"Where would you go, Jean?" she asked.

"If one sails westward from here in a few days he will reach some islands called Britain. They have a king there, as we have here, and nobles, but I understand that the people are active, and there are opportunities for poor men to make a good living. But if one continues on southwestward he will come to a great continent called America. The people there have no king, no nobles. All are on the same level so far as the law is concerned. To that land people of small means from all nations are flocking. There is plenty of land there which is very rich, and great factories where people work, and those who are skilled receive wages that are unheard of here in Norway. I am thinking of going to America to join in the battle for fortune."

"But, Jean," cried the girl, "you are not skilled at any work, and in no country are farms given away. Having no trade and no money to buy a farm, what will you do to earn a living? And where will you get money to pay your way?"

"I am now of a proper age to learn a trade, and as to the means for the journey I shall work my passage. I shall go on a ship to Hamburg, for which I have the money. There, I understand, there are great vessels sailing to America. They need many persons to wait on the passengers, and it will not be difficult for me to secure one of these places."

"How did you learn all this?"

"Lars Olsen told me; he has been to Hamburg."

Elsa was looking out to the westward, and Jean saw tears gathering in her eyes. He put his arms about her and kissed her. The boundary between childhood and youth had been passed. From that moment they were lovers, though they were still unconscious of the change.

"Don't cry, Elsa," said Jean. "When I have become a skilled workman I will send for you to come over the sea and be with me."

"How could I go over there and be with you, Jean? That would not be right."

"But I will then be a man and you a woman; we can be married."

This ingenuous proposal did not seem to give comfort to Elsa. She said that it would be a long while before Jean could send for her, and even then she could not leave her father and mother, who were every day becoming more dependent upon her. This made Jean feel ashamed, for he knew that he, too, was needed at home. But Jean looked further into the future than Elsa and had more resolution to break the barriers between him and success. Besides, he looked forward to the day when, having become a skilled laborer, he could earn more than he needed for himself and could send money to his parents.

It was a sad day for all when Jean departed. His mother begged him to stay, but his father approved of his going.

"Goodby, my son," he said. "I have heard of that great country beyond the sea where the people are the government and where the workingman must be educated for what he does the same as the lawyer, the doctor and the priest. And they tell me that when he learns his trade he is protected by the trade unions against the competition of those who are unskilled. Go, and God grant that you may prosper."

Elsa went a part way on the road with Jean and when they parted surprised him by encouraging him instead of giving way to repining.

"It will not seem long, dear Jean, before you will be building houses or railroads or ships, and every day you will earn more than you need, so that you can send money to your father and mother to buy them comforts they sorely need in their old age."

"But I shall not be satisfied, sweetheart, till I have earned not only enough for that, but to send for you to come to me."

Nevertheless they had no sooner passed away from each other than Jean's eyes became moist, and Elsa broke down and sobbed as though her heart would break.

* * * * * * *

An ocean liner came sailing down the coast and, entering the lower bay of New York, made its way up toward Ellis island, where emigrants must prove that they come within the laws governing their admission to the United States of America. Among those who were transferred from the vessel to the island was a young woman, who gave her name as Elsa Vogan and her age as twenty-two. She stepped from the lighter that bore her to the dock and looked about her as if expecting some one to meet her; but, seeing no one she knew, her expression of expectancy changed to one of disappointment. Passing with the throng into the apartment where emigrants present their claims for admission, Elsa was brought before an official for examination.

"What means have you?" he asked.

"Only a few silver coins left over after paying for my passage."

"How do you expect to live here in America?"

"I came over here to be married. I expected to meet at the dock when I landed the man who will marry me, but he did not appear."

The official asked the man's name and where he lived. Elsa told him that his name was Jean Stahren and that he was an ironworker in Pennsylvania, but what place in Pennsylvania she could not tell him.

Elsa was told that she might remain on the island for a few days, but if at the end of that time her lover did not appear she must be sent back to Hamburg, whence she had sailed. This was a terrible blow to the poor girl, for she knew that there was some reason why Jean had not met her, which might not be corrected within so short a time.

Fortunately it was summer, the end of August, and Ellis island, surrounded as it is by water, was not a disagreeable place to wait. Elsa gazed out over the bay, wondering at the gigantic statue of Liberty, at the skyscrapers of lower New York, at the Brooklyn suspension bridge and at Castle Williams on Governors island. A day passed, and Jean did not appear. Another day went by and still there were no tidings of him. The third day was Sunday, the 1st of September. Elsa was called before one of the immigration officials and informed that a steamer would sail for Hamburg the next day and if she could not satisfy the authorities that she would not be a burden on the United States before that time she would be sent back to Germany, whence she came.

Elsa was in agony. Jean had sent her the money for her passage, at the same time telling her to write him the name of the steamer on which she would sail, promising to meet her on the dock when the ship arrived. She had written him the name of the steamer, but, not being versed in the ways of the world, had not mentioned the date of its arrival, though she had said that she expected to sail about the last of August. And now, after having waited seven years to be united to Jean and having come all the way across the Atlantic ocean for the purpose, she must go back to Hamburg.

That Sunday was a sultry afternoon, and Elsa in order to get cool sat on the dock gloomily looking out over the waters of the bay. She saw a little steamer leave New York and make for the island. Boats were coming often, and she had looked when each had arrived for Jean. But now she had given up hope. When the boat reached the dock she scarcely noticed those who came ashore. But a man passed near her, stopped and looked at her scrutinizingly.

"Elsa!" he exclaimed.

She arose and for a moment did not recognize Jean, for he wore a full beard.

"Oh, Jean!" she cried. "Why have you not come before?"

"How long have you been here?"

"Three days."

"I supposed you would come on the steamer that is telegraphed to be here presently."

Elsa had little education, and she had written the name of the ship on which she would sail so badly that Jean could not read it. He had therefore judged of the time of her arrival from the date she gave and consequently fell between two steamers. But he wasted few words in explanation.

"Come, Elsa," he said. "We must be married at once, go to New York and leave for my home in Pennsylvania on a night train. Tomorrow will be Labor day, and I am at the head of the committee of arrangements for my union and have much to do."

So Jean and Elsa were married on the island and left there at once. It was past midnight when they reached their home, a cottage near a steel works where Jean was employed. Though it was late Elsa found time to admire the cozy home that Jean had prepared for her.

The first day Elsa spent in America was Labor day, and though she saw little of her husband she saw one of the most important celebrations of the new world.

Jean Stahren became a master mechanic, and, having a wife who was a good manager, they sent monthly remittances to the old folks in Norway and after awhile made them a visit. But by this time they took with them several children to introduce to their grandparents.

STUDY IN BUNGALOW ARCHITECTURE.

Design 1015, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH

INTERIOR VIEW—BED CHAMBER.

The interior view accompanying this bungalow design shows a very inviting chamber. A finish in white enamel with mahogany doors and furniture would make a good color scheme. This bedroom has an alcove with built-in seat, making a very cozy corner. Special attention is called to the inverted light in the center of this room. This is the only sane and sensible lighting for a bedroom or any other room for that matter. An inverted light when properly installed gives a soft, mellow light over the entire room with no shadows and comes the nearest to perfect daylight that has ever been invented by man's ingenuity. The cost of this building, exclusive of heating and plumbing, is $4,500.

Upon receipt of $1 the publisher of this paper will furnish a copy of Saxton's new 1914 book of plans, "American Dwellings." It contains 310 designs costing from $1,000 to $6,000; also a book of interiors, $1.50 per copy.

Innocent Old Age.

"Youthful innocence" is one of those expressions which is untrue so far as criminals are concerned. It is a remarkable fact that a criminal is at his worst when he is young, and the older he becomes the better the life he leads.

Criminal statistics show, as a matter of fact, that the most virtuous age of the average wrongdoer is between fifty and sixty. It is in the very earliest part of their careers, between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one, that men and women criminals are at their worst. From twenty-one to old age they gradually improve.

This also goes to prove another remarkable fact about criminals, and that is that marriage helps to reform a man or woman. At the average age at which most people marry there is a remarkable drop in criminal statistics.

Between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one—the time when a man is at his worst, criminally speaking—are just those years when a child is breaking away from its parents and is allowed to go free.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Story of Stevenson.

After one of Dumas' plays which he saw presented in Paris and in which a man employs an unworthy stratagem against a woman Robert Louis Stevenson wrote:

"I came forth from that performance in a breathing heat of indignation. On the way down the Francais stairs I trod on an old gentleman's toes, whereupon, with that suavity which so well becomes me, I turned about to apologize and on the instant, repenting me of that intention, stopped the apology midway and added something in French to this effect: 'No. You are one of the persons who have been applauding that piece. I retract my apology.'

"Said the old Frenchman, laying his hand on my arm and with a smile that was truly heavenly in temperance, irony, good nature and knowledge of the world, 'Ah, monsieur, vous etes bien jeune' (Ah, sir, you are very young)."

Colors of Rainbows.

Violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange and red are the colors of the rainbow. Most are sure of that. It is true, however, of only a very few rainbows. The colors of rainbows vary with their width, and their width varies with the size of the raindrops, big drops producing narrow bows with bright clearly defined colors, small drops producing wide bows with pale colors. Here are the colors as generally seen: (1) When the raindrops average one millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange, light red, dark red; (2) when the drops average three-tenths of a millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange; (3) when the drops average one-tenth of a millimeter, very pale violet, violet whitish blue, whitish green.

FOOD FOR LONDON

The World's Largest City Is Ever on the Verge of Famine.

COULD BE EASILY STARVED.

If Supplies From Abroad Were Cut Off For a Few Weeks Death Would Ravage the Great and Wealthy Metropolis—Sources of Its Provisions.

London is a city and a county, but it is so immense and so diverse that it might almost be said to be a country. One of the most striking things about London is its utter inability to feed itself. In the matter of food its very immensity is the cause of its utter dependence. If supplies were cut off from without it would starve to death in a few weeks.

It is the richest city in the world. It has palatial shops, thousands of stores and countless warehouses, but it produces practically nothing in the shape of foodstuff. It is like a great baby that has to be fed by its mother, the world, and the produce of the world fills the mouths of its 7,500,000 inhabitants.

By the rail, the river and the road all that Londoners eat and drink is brought to them, and three-quarters of it all is conveyed in ships from abroad.

Until the beginning of the nineteenth century London had no docks. Today they cover an area of twenty-two miles, and wheat from the United States, Russia, Canada and the Argentine is disgorged into their granaries from the holds of ships like so much sand. Many Londoners have never seen the docks, but two loaves out of every three that they eat are made from the grain that comes to them through those docks.

Most of the grain ships berth in the Victoria docks, but since they are so necessary to the city's welfare they have the right to moor at any quay in the port of London, a privilege no other vessels possess.

The London butchers never cease to sound the praise of English beef and mutton, but they sell little that is really English. All the cattle that are shipped to London alive pass ashore at Deptford into the market which stands on the site of the dockyard where Peter the Great learned shipbuilding. Every animal is inspected by a government official, and those that are in any way diseased are killed and cremated straightway.

Cattle come by train from all parts of the kingdom to the Metropolitan cattle market at Islington, traveling through the night, and on Mondays and Thursdays the market opens at dawn and continues till 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The cattle that are sold are driven to the slaughter houses and killed, and the meat is on sale at Smithfield early next morning.

At 2 o'clock in the morning this market is ablaze with light, and the streets in the vicinity are blocked with railway vans. At 4 o'clock the salesmen are in their places, and soon afterward the buyers from the big shops arrive, and the sawdust strewn avenues of red and yellow carcasses are thronged.

Smithfield's daily supply of beef and mutton is about 1,000 tons, but only a fifth of this meat is British, and much of the mutton comes from New Zealand via the Victoria docks.

The county of Kent is noted for its fruits and vegetables, but London would be unable to satisfy its craving for green stuff without the aid of other countries. The miscellaneous vegetables annually brought into England from abroad are worth close to $5,000,000.

There are several markets in the metropolis for such wares—Spitalfields, the Great Northern potato market and the Farringdon fruit and vegetable market—but the bulk of the apples, oranges, lemons, onions, potatoes and other roots that are brought from France, Italy, Spain and Algiers find their way from the docks of Covent Garden in common with the home grown fruit and vegetables which reach London from all points of the compass in boxes and baskets piled high on lumbering vans.

Most of the market gardeners sell their own wares at "the Garden," while the foreign stuff is sold at auction. For 300 years this place has been the premier market of London for vegetables, fruits and flowers, and there are firms who have traded beneath its glass roof for generations.

Some of the fish that feeds London is landed on a floating pontoon at the river front of Billingsgate market, and at a very early hour in the morning one may, if he chooses, gaze upon fishing smacks from the North sea, little open barges loaded with fish that have been lightered from larger vessels in the docks and clumsy looking Dutch galliots loaded with eels which are entitled under a charter granted by Queen Elizabeth to sail up the Thames and moor below London bridge.

The railway companies convey 79,000 tons of fish from different parts of the coast in the course of a year, while the boats convey 57,000 tons. The tolling of a big bell announces the opening of the market at 5 o'clock, and thereafter the fishmongers are busy buying, and the fish porters in their long smocks and flat topped hats scurry from the stalls to the carts bearing fish boxes on their heads.

The provision business is a network of commerce in itself, but there is a big daily distribution throughout London, because without it London would have to live on dry bread, meat and vegetables.—New York Press.
